MOUNTAIN IDYLS

Did you ever stand at the top of that beautiful waterfall near Valle Crucis, where gurgling, laughing Dutch Creek plunges eighty feet, so the neighbors say, from a moss-grown wall of granite to a crystal poor beneath? ... well I did! And what an eyeful! ... state-ly hemlocks, slender poplars, magnificent oaks, standing sentinel over a far-flung orchard of rhododendron and mountain laurel ... over a tangled infinity of wild mountain loveliness! Pown through this canyon of green boughs, and limpid pools, and white rapids, and waving wild-flowers the vision wanders to Valley Mountain with its patchy acres of corn ground, its miniature pastures, its grazing flocks ... to rustic homes in the valley where happy children play! A trout—one of the native speckled kind—splashes the pool as he seeks a belated dinner ... a bob-white calls his mate from a distant grain field ... a late sun sends shafts of gold through the secluded bower ... and you turn your back, reluctantly, on something that will live in memory for many a day! That's Dutch Creek Falls ... which lies within the hospitable precincts of Valle Crucis!

Did you ever pause for a just a moment in the gap of Rich Mountain ... along about sunset ... when Mother Nature has brought out her pallet, her brushes and colors to splash heavenly designs on the western skies ... to gild, during the receding moments of twilight, a landscape to halt the feeble breath of man? No? Well I did! Away to the left of you lies Grandfather's face, carved in ancient stone ... a wreath of filmy cloud caught in his whiskers ... and Hanging Rock, which guards the enterprising village of Banner Elk ... and the towering pinnacles of the Beech ... and the crest of the Roan with its magnificent balsams hidden by the blue haze of distance ... and the far-away Unakas of East Tennessee ... and the smoky spires of countless mountain chains not catalogued in the Sketch Man's mind! The scene is fast changing ... darkness settles in the tiny valleys ... lights appear in the windows of many a distant cot ... the crest of Rich Mountain carries its last flush of subdued gold ... day is done!

Did you ever stop at Lawyer Lovill's home, just west of the village, as night draws on her ebony garments ... to puff a pipe on his wide veranda ... to enjoy his stories and strengthening philosophy? Well, I did! An embryonic millwheel in the nearby brook lends its cheerful tune to a chorus of crickets ... a screech owl, way up on the face of the Pinnacle offers his plaintive call ... a breeze, carrying the chilling hint of approaching fall weather stirs the tall Lombardy poplars and tamaracks ... you lean deep in your rocking chair ... inhale a couple of good deep draws of the Lawyer's "hillside navy" ... you draw your coat closer ... and kinda wonder why you ever have to leave it all! why you ever have to worry over installment collectors ... over printing newspapers ... over past-due notes ... over grocery bills ... over the opinions of other people ... over a thousand and one of those pesky little things that make life miserable for us of the two-legged horde? A visit up to Lawyer Lovill's house during the early night hours makes a fellow feel that way!

BRAINS APLENTY

Here's a little ditty we gleaned from the Christian Herald ... a good story, and something to fill this column: It's brains you're looking for, I've just heard of some you'll be bound to respect. Out in Omaha, the officials who hire men for the Farm Credit Bureau have one of those highly scientific intelligence tests to which every candidate is subjected. Up to a few days ago, these tests included a couple of catch questions—the kind that couldn't be answered. You proved you had brains by not trying to answer them. Well, all went according to plan until a young University of Iowa graduate turned up for the exams. He was asked the two questions—and to the horror of the scientists he answered both of them. Here they are, with his answers: "How long," read the question, "is a piece of string?" "A piece of string," said the bright boy from Iowa, "is twice as long as the distance between its center and either end." Think over that one. "How far," read the second question, "can a dog run into the woods?" To which the young Iowan answered: "A dog can run only half way into the woods. After that he's running out of the woods." The joke was on the scientists. But that's only half the joke. For the test contained another question; one

WITHDRAWS APPEAL

Kernit Wilcox Tuesday appeared before the Recorders Court, withdrew his appeal to Superior Court and asked to begin serving his sentence of eight months on the roads for larceny of mules, passed several weeks ago. of the kind that you'd get away with in New York, but not in Omaha. Here it is: "If A gave a mortgage on a mule to B and the mule had a colt, who would own the colt?" And for that one the bright boy's answer was: "That mule can't have a colt."

HIGHWAY PATROLMEN ARE ASSIGNED TO NEW POSTS

One Motorcycle Officer to Be Stationed at Boone, Extra Session of Legislature Not Likely, WPA Projects are Hastened.

By M. R. DUNNAGAN (Special Correspondent)

RALEIGH, N. C.—Watauga County farmers received $7,732.61 in AAA rental and benefit payments distributed to growers co-operating in the crop adjustment programs during the fiscal year ended last July 30th, Dean I. O. Schaub, of State College, reports. These payments, he adds, are only a part of the increase in farm income. The rise in prices paid to growers for their commodities has in many instances increased their income more than the amount of rental and benefit payments, Dean Schaub said.

Total payments in North Carolina for the fiscal year were $14,732,147.51, of which $8,015,380.21 went to cotton growers, $5,945,844.43 to tobacco growers, $719,363.20 to corn-hog growers, and $51,599.67 to wheat growers. Expenses of administering the programs for the year were $1,147,290.71, about seven per cent of the amount distributed in the State. Most of this went to county and community committees named from local farmers to aid county agents.

IMPROVE STATE INSTITUTIONS

The Governor and Council of State have been busy in recent days getting ready for Federal funds as grants to supplement State funds for improving, enlarging and equipping State institutions. The General Assembly provided for a bond issue of $500,000 for the three State hospitals for the insane and Caswell Training School, and for $2,000,000 for other State institutions but on projects to be self-liquidating. The bond issue has been ordered and the plans are to get these projects approved before the deadline this week and next.

CONVICTS ESCAPE

Six convicts in the Macon County camp near Franklin jumped on a lone guard trying to overpower him and escape. One escaped, but the guard shot one, likely to death, stopped another with a load, clubbed a third with his gun, and two others surrendered to a nearby guard who came to the aid of his lone fellow. Most of the prisoners had bad records, murder, robbery and the like.

PATROLMEN GIVEN POSTS

Sixty-six State Highway patrolmen were paraded before Governor Ehringhaus who issued them commissions as State officials Friday, after they had been sworn in by Justice Clarkson, and they were then assigned to the respective posts over the State by M. C. S. Noble Jr., executive assistant commissioner of revenue. Two of them fill vacant places on the old guard, the 64 being added by act of the 1935 General Assembly, making a total of 121 officers and men, headed by Captain Charles D. Farmer. The troops and divisions remain the same. (Continued on Page 3)

Mr. George T. Robbins, head of the Northwest Carolina Utilities plant which furnishes electrical energy to Blowing Rock, was in town Saturday, and tells The Democrat that for the sixth time this summer the streets of the resort town have been thrown into utter darkness as unknown prowlers smashed the public lights with rifle shots. Friday night 45 of the lamps were destroyed, a BB rifle being used as the miscreants cruised through the town in the early hours of the evening.

Mr. Robbins has offered a cash reward for information leading to the arrest of those who so wantonly satisfy their preference for darkness, and has bright hopes of ascertaining their identity.

A CORRECTION

A suggested purchase of the Coffey lot on Main Street in Blowing Rock, published in The Blowing Rocket for August 31, 1935, as part of an account of a meeting held at Blowing Rock last week, was entirely without his knowledge or authorization, it was stated to the Blowing Rock news. paper this week by the owner, Mr. Tom Coffey. The meeting was held to discuss the possibility of purchasing the Coffey lot as the site for a town park, and was attended by year-round and summer residents on Wednesday, August 28th, in the Mayview Manor ballroom.

Since Mr. Coffey disclaims the proposed purchase, the publishers of the Blowing Rocket are glad to make this retraction through the columns of the county newspaper. The proposed purchase was reported with the news of local interest in the Rocket, whose next issue will not appear until next June. The Publishers, The Blowing Rocket.
