To the wrappers they set a flame.

Despite the fact that Governor Ehinghaus has announced he will not commutation, there were technicalities in the law changing the mode of execution in this state from electrocution to gas that had to be reck ned with.

Warden H. H. Honeycutt, of Central prison, and Oscar Pitts, acting directors of the state penal division took cognizance of the indefinite provision as to effectiveness of the law and conferred with Attorney General A. A. F. Seawell and Edwin M Gill, state parole commissioner.

The Supreme Court has not decided whether the gas act applies to capital felons sentenced after July 1, or only to those committing crimes after that date. The only thing cer-tain is that it applies definitely to all crimes committed after July 1.

But Johnson committed his crime last February, and under one con-struction of the law his sentence should be death by electrocution.

Gill promised a statement "early this week" on the matter. The court may decide the question this week on one case pending before it. dications today were that execution of Johnson may be postponed pending some definite decision as to the effectiveness of the law.
