

Halloween Broadcast Terrorizes Students

By GENE WIKE

Cosmopolitan with the rest of the sections which were electrified with Orson Wells' dramatization of the imaginary invasion of Mars Sunday night, the students of Appalachian College, and especially freshmen who were beset with a certain degree of homesickness anyway, are having a hard time making themselves believe that their fear made them as foolish as their actions acclaimed them.

In her fit of hysterics while listening to the broadcast, one girl slung the radio from its location and joined with a number of others in seeking condolence from respective macons, who told them the best thing to do was to cut off the lights, go to bed and pray. And that's just what many did, with their heads under the covers.

Not a great deal unlike the girls in any respect, the boys sought out their co-ed sweethearts on this occasion which seemed to be the end of time, and for the first time found no barriers to the girls waiting, even though curfew had rung two hours prior. And a pretty sight they were, too, with co-eds resting their sobbing heads on the brave shoulders of their college "sweetie," and some seeking just any old shoulder that would offer comfort during this occasion which provoked a receptive mood to any type personality. Finding his girl friend crying on another's scapula, Earl Smith, football star, informed his benefactor, "End of time or no end of time, tend to your own girl; she's mine!"

While this was the effect on some, others placed numerous long distance telephone calls to the homefolk, who seemed just as anxious to receive as the students were to give.

And out in Boone, the citizens carried on in similar fashion. The telephone lines kept buzzing with inquiries, and amidst it all came Mayor Gragg's quaking voice appealing for some information that might quiet his nerves as well as serve to pacify the people who had sought his advice during this seemingly disastrous occasion.

Lesson for November 6

HONORING OUR PARENTS

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 20:12; Luke 2:46-52; John 19:26, 27; Ephesians 6:1-4.
GOLDEN TEXT—Honor thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee.—Exodus 20:12.

The splendid obedience of parents to their children has been pointed out as one of the remarkable developments of modern life. No, we have not made a mistake in writing or in typesetting. We mean just what we say—the obedience of parents to their children. In all too many homes God's order has been reversed and instead of honoring and obeying their parents, children (both young and old) have taken the place of "boss," and mother and father must obey if they want peace and rest.

The need for our lesson of today is both great and acute. The future happiness of hundreds of thousands of children (Eph. 6:3) and the present welfare of thousands of neglected and boss-ridden parents will depend on the intelligence and faithfulness with which this lesson is taught in our churches, and the honesty of heart with which men and women study and receive its truth.

I. The Command of God (Exod. 20:12).

The first and most important consideration to come before us is—what is the mind and will of the Maker of us all regarding this matter of the relation between parents and children? His words are plain—we are to "honor" our fathers and our mothers.

The word "honor" carries with it a great many things, but perhaps the three outstanding elements are respect, obedience, and affection. We should look up to them with high regard, obey them as long as they have the authority over us, and show true affection for them.

II. The Example of Jesus (Luke 2:46-52).

The fact that Jesus was God manifest in the flesh only enhances the glory of His conduct. He who is divine presents an example of obedience and consideration both as boy and man which we do well to emulate.

1. As a boy (Luke 2:46-52). The boy Jesus, increasing "in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man," (v. 52) had come to His twelfth year and with His parents had gone up to Jerusalem to celebrate the Passover. There moved in His heart the conviction that He must now be about His Father's business—an altogether proper and commendable purpose but one which resulted for the moment in separation from His parents. This was far more serious than a physical separation, for we read that He did not understand Him (v. 50). Tragic indeed are the consequences of our failure to understand our children. Notice, however, that Jesus did not withdraw Himself from their watch care, nor refuse to obey them even though they failed to understand Him. Equally tragic are the results of hasty and bitter separations brought about by the disobedience of children.

2. As a man (John 19:26, 27). The value of our lesson will be greatly reduced if we see only the responsibility of children while they are young. We are the children of our parents as long as we and they live. Being grown up and having a family of one's own does not relieve one of the precious responsibility of care for one's parents. Jesus was dying on the cross, His brethren apparently still regarded Him in unbelief, and His mother now needed a son to care for her. Even in His dying agony Jesus remembers to commit her to the care of His beloved disciple, John. One marvels at the carelessness and hardness of heart that will permit men and women who have time and money for everything else and yet will neglect their aged parents and even shunt them off into a public institution for care. Notice the promise that accompanies the command of God (Exod. 20:12; Eph. 6:3). If that is the reward of those who do right, what do you think will be the punishment of those who disobey God?

III. The Admonition of Paul (Eph. 6:1-4).

This matter of honoring and obeying parents "is right," says Paul. It is the Lord's way. Only if parents command their children to do wickedness would there be ground for disobedience to parents. Apart from such circumstances every parent has the right to expect the child's obedience.

There is tremendously important truth on the other side of the picture. Parents are not to provoke their children to anger, to disrespect or disobedience. How much we need God's grace at that point. It is so easy to say and do things that needlessly irritate our children. It is so convenient to nag at a careless child. Often we expect more of them than their age will justify. We are apt to punish them in a spirit of anger or revenge and thus to destroy the value of discipline. May God help us, who are parents, that we may take to heart this part of our lesson. Our children are our most valuable possession.

Mountaineers Blank Western Carolina 27-0

The Appalachian Mountaineers ran roughshod over the Western Carolina Catamounts here Saturday and won the football game, 27-0.

Three teams which included nearly every man on the Appalachian squad, saw action. They ran up a 7 to 0 lead in the first half and then turned on the steam in the third with two touchdowns and a placement score again in the final.

With the execution of the final minutes of the last quarter when they recovered a Mountaineer fumble on Appalachian's 10-yard line, the Catamounts failed to threaten. This time the threat was stopped when the invaders' pass to the end zone was intercepted by an Appalachian back.

Appalachian's first counter came near the middle of the second quarter when Hudson plunged through from the one-yard-line where Daugherty and Gaffney had assisted him in carrying the pigskin from their own 27. Gaffney sparked his way to the second touchdown, taking the ball around his own left end from the Catamount's 29 and running at cross standing up. Daugherty's score through center from the one-yard marker in the last of the third followed a succession of first downs from the Catamount's 40 in which Earl Smith, Hoover, Hudson and Gaffney figured.

Couch Brewer ran in his second team during the final period which quickly accounted for another touchdown at the hands of Safrit, Purdue and Clark, who staged a drive from Appalachian's 38 to Callowhee's one-yard line. Safrit took the ball over tackle to tally. Safrit carried the call around right end for the extra point.
