tors filed, Folger Townsend of Lenoir, being an exception. Those filing their candidacies in the 10th district are James C. Farthing of Lenoir, Horace Kennedy of Shelby, and

M. T. Leatherman of Lincoln. E. H. McCorkle of Charlotte, became the last to file for the Democratic congressional nomination in the tenth district. He will oppose Hamilton C. Jones and M. R. is not seeking to return to congress. Congressional incumbents in the third, fourth, ninth and eleventh districts will be unopposed for the Democratic nominations. However, a Republican is entered in each district except the second. Representatives from the first, second, seventh and twelfth districts have one opponent each in the Democratic primaries.

John J. Ingle of Winston-Salem, got his fee in just ahead of the deadline Saturday as a Republican candidate for the state supreme court seat now held by Associate M. V. Barnhill of Rocky Mount, but was disqualified on a technicality. Associate Justice J. W. Winborne of Marion, will be opposed in the election by Herbert F. Seawell, Jr., of Carthage. Neither incumbent justices is opposed in the Democratic primary.

None of the 11 superior court judges up for re-election will have opposition for the Democratic nominations. Only one Republican filed for this office—Oscar B. Turner of Rose Hill who will oppose Judge H. L. Stevens, Jr., of Warsaw in the sixth district.

Only two Republicans filed for solicitorships—John B. Williams, Jr., oppose J. B. Barker in the sixth and A. E. Hall, of Yadkinville, the Republican incumbent in the 17th district in which no Democratic candidate filed.

Boone, North Carolina

You know our town.
What do you think about...

People respect the opinion of their pharmacist and drug store owner. To them he is a combination of professional man, merchant, neighbor and friend. They value his view on subjects as varied as health and politics.

The purpose of this message, however, is not to praise your pharmacist. The point is that he and hundreds of pharmacists all over North Carolina have a unique responsibility to their community.

He is close to the people. The average North Carolinian visits a drug store once a week.

His place of business is trusted. Perhaps more than any other type of retail merchandise, drug store items are sold upon the recommendation of the store owner.

Thus, a druggist has a natural opportunity and responsibility to promote and boost what is worthwhile for his community. The result may be as significant as getting folks to understand better the value of public health and sanitation. Or it may be as down to earth as putting in his store window a card advertising the local hospital's money raising campaign.

But whatever the worthy cause may be, your pharmacist is glad to help. Indeed, to do otherwise would be to neglect the opportunities and responsibilities which go with his profession and business.
