Strip Cropping is Great Soil Saver

Anyone who doubts the value of strip cropping on rolling land should visit V. E. Coltrane of Guilford county, says Frank Doggett, extension soil conservationist at State College. Strip cropping not only saves soil but it also helps to greatly increase crop yields. Coltrane produced 74 bushels of hybrid corn per acre on one of his strips last year as compared with about 20 bushels of open pollinated corn under the old method of up and down hill, as was the case several years ago. So enthusiastic is Coltrane about strip cropping that he maintains that he will soon be able to make 100 bushels of corn per acre and "not stain his land."

The fields on the Coltrane farm are planted in strips, alternately to row crops and soil building legumes. "If the soil and water break away on the cultivated strips, it is caught by the crop strips, and the water seeps into the ground instead of running off," says Coltrane. "Then the cover crops are turned under, making the soil loose and as porous as blotting paper. I believe that with this practice I am building at least one-half inch of topsoil on this land a year."

"The sod waterways in these fields furnish a surer crop of the finest kind of hay. I don't have to buy extensive seed every year and I don't have to take the time and expense of preparing a seed bed. I also don't have to buy fertilizer every year to get hay crops. I have that time and money, and also the land, to grow legumes for soil building purposes."

"The string-row method has helped me increase tobacco yields. The soil conservation service is due much credit for introducing these new practices."

Cures For Colds Sixty Years Ago

Schenectady, N. Y. ... Fantastic remedies suggested for the common cold 60 years ago were described here by Dr. Louis C. Jones of the State College for Teachers, Albany, N. Y., in a G-E Science Forum address over WGY. "The Albany Times in 1886 suggested that, in the realm of preventive medicine, the best thing to do toward a cold was to take a bath in hot whiskey and rock salt twice a year," Dr. Jones said. "I suppose the rock salt is there so you won't drawn." "There are some less expensive remedies for colds that I am also glad to pass on to you," the speaker, who is editor of the New York Folklore Quarterly, pointed out. For example, it was discovered down in Calcoo, N. Y., that if you take the skin of the leaf lard from the left side of a pig, put it on your chest and keep it there, you'll be over your cold in no time. "If that, by any chance, doesn't work and you are still able to get around despite your hacking cough, you might try crawling through a double-rooted briar moving from west to east," according to old legends.
