If Election Fails House Settles Matter

Washington—What would happen if the States' Rights group and Progressives should syphon off enough electoral votes that no presidential candidate gets a majority this fall?

The Constitution says that if no candidate gets a majority, 266 of the nation's 531 electoral votes, then the House of Representatives shall choose from the three candidates having the highest number.

Each state has one vote for President in a House contest. How it will be cast is decided by a majority of the state's delegation.

A candidate must get a majority of the state's delegation, 25 out of the 48.

What happens if none of the top three gets a majority in the House before January 20, when the Constitution specifies that the President shall take office?

The vice president takes over. But if no presidential candidate has won a majority of the electoral votes it's not likely any vice presidential candidate would either.

When no candidate for vice president gets a majority of the electoral vote, the contest is decided by the Senate. If the Senate has elected, then the winner acts as President until the House chooses one.

What would happen if the two houses became deadlocked and could not elect a President or vice president by January 20?

House Parliamentarian Lewis Deschler says that under Public Law 199 of the 80th Congress the Speaker of the House would take over. The present speaker is Joseph Martin (R-Mass) who is running for re-election.

A permanent deadlock—which has never occurred—would leave the speaker as President until the next election.

The House twice has chosen the President, in 1801 and in 1825.

In 1876 a commission created by congressional act voted 8-to-7 to credit the contested electoral votes of South Carolina, Florida, Oregon and Louisiana to Rutherford B. Hayes, a Republican. He thus was seated over Samuel J. Tilden, a Democrat.

In the first strictly House test Thomas Jefferson of Virginia was elected over Aaron Burr of New York. Both were Democrats and in the popular election each won 73 electoral votes. It took the House seven days and 36 ballots to settle on Jefferson. Vermont and Maryland finally swung to him after being evenly divided and passing numerous times.

Burr became vice president. In 1825 the man with the electoral votes didn't become President.

Andrew Jackson of Tennessee got 99 electoral votes; John Quincy Adams of Massachusetts 84; William H. Crawford of Georgia 41, and Henry Clay of Kentucky 37. Nobody had a majority.

Adams won with 13 votes in the House to seven for Jackson and four for Crawford. There were only 24 states then.

Jackson ran again four years later and won. In 1832 he was re-elected.

The Senate elected Richard M. Johnson of Kentucky, Martin Van Buren's running mate in 1837, the only time it ever was called upon to choose a vice president.

There were four vice presidential and five presidential candidates that year. States' Rights Democrats claim their presidential candidate, Gov.

Ashe Burley Grows to Vote

Washington—Growers of the West Jefferson marketing area will vote on October 5-7 inclusive to determine whether they want free tobacco inspection and grading services, the Agriculture Department announced this week.

All farmers who sold tobacco on the West Jefferson market last season are eligible to vote, and ballots will be mailed to all growers whose names and addresses are known. Those who do not receive ballots may obtain them from their county agent or from the office of the county Agricultural Conservation Association.

To be counted, ballots must be postmarked not later than midnight October 7. If two-thirds of the growers voting approve tobacco inspections, the West Jefferson market will be designated to receive free and mandatory tobacco inspection and market news service. This referendum should not be confused with referendums held on marketing quotas.

Storm Thurmond of South Carolina, and his running mate, Gov. Fielding Wright of Mississippi, are certain to get the electoral votes of Alabama (11), Arkansas (9), Florida (8), Georgia (12), Louisiana (10), Mississippi (9), South Carolina (8) and Texas (23).

They say they have "high hopes" of capturing Kentucky (11), Maryland (8), North Carolina (14), Tennessee (12) and Virginia (11).

If the 156 electoral votes of these 13 states had been taken away from the late President Roosevelt and his vice presidential candidate, Harry S. Truman, in 1944 they still would have won with 276.

Some politicians hastily say that if the Republicans elect a majority of the House and the presidential election goes there that Dewey is in. That is not necessarily so. They would have to hold the majority of the seats in a majority of the state delegations—not just a House majority.

WRONG LETTER LEADS TO ALTRA Paterson, N. J.—In 1944, Pvt. Louis Carola received a letter addressed to Pvt. Louis Carola. He opened it but, upon reading it, realized that the letter was not intended for him. The letter had been written by Sofia Carola, of Patterson, to her brother, Louis, shortly after he was injured in the Battle of the Bulge. The wrong Carola re-sealed the letter, inserted a note of apology and mailed it back to Sofia. A correspondence began and resulted in the wedding of the two, which recently took place.

What Is The Farm Bureau? The Farm Bureau is over a million and a quarter farm families, bound together for one common cause—to work for a fair share of the National Income for all farmers—Sharecroppers, tenants, and land-owners—all alike, operating in forty-five states on the combined judgment of farm people from the county to the state and on to the national office in Washington, D. C.; where one of its men meets with every committee that has anything to do with agricultural legislation. It was organized to form the missing link between the farmers and existing agencies working on agricultural problems. Farm Bureau has made it possible for farm people to be recognized as a dominant force in shaping policies affecting Agriculture. WHAT IS THE NORTH CAROLINA FARM BUREAU? The North Carolina Farm Bureau consists of over seventy thousand members of which approximately four thousand are associate members, consisting of banks, warehouses, and other business firms in this state. The Farm Bureau program supplements rather than competes with private business. Therefore, we solicit the active participation of all the leaders of our State in formulating a sound agricultural program. WHAT IS THE FARM BUREAU DOING? The Farm Bureau at this time through the County, State, and National Commodity Committees and Boards of Directors; the National office in Chicago and the Washington office with their contacts with the legislative and administrative branches of the Federal government is trying to keep 1948 or any future year from being another 1932 by securing the enactment of a sound, permanent farm program which will enable farmers to continue as well as expand their soil conservation practices and obtain fair prices for their products.
