In requesting change of address, it is important to mention the OLD, as well as the NEW address. Entered at the postoffice at Boone, N. C., at second class mail matter, under the act of Congress of March 3, 1879.

"The basis of our government being the opinion of the people, the very first objective should be to keep that right, and were it left to me to decide whether we should have a government without newspapers, or newspapers without government. I should not hesitate a moment to choose the later. But I should mean that every man should receive these papers and be capable of reading them."-Thomas Jefferson.

TAKE A BOW!

Of interest to the people of Boone, where the business of making school teachers is the big industry, is the discovery that school teachers are considered the most useful citizens of the community.

Elmo Roper, in a nationwide survey, came to this conclusion, and in his poll found that only ten per cent voted for lawyers as the most important people in a community; 13 per cent for the merchant; 20 per cent for the Mayor or some other top public official, and 27 per cent for the clergy. Teachers topped them all with a vote of 31 per cent!

SHOULD HONOR ICKES

A number of newspapers have noted the part the late Harold L. Ickes played in the establishment of the Blue Ridge Parkway along the route as we now know it, and their suggestion that some peak along the route be named for the former Secretary of the Interior, is timely. Had it not been for the action of Mr. Ickes the location of the Parkway would have followed the Tennessee route.

The self-styled "curmudgeon," staunch friend of the New Deal, and relentless foe of its enemies, made a magnificent contribution to the welfare and progress of North Carolina, when he decided the Parkway routing in favor of this State. We agree that the ection should perpetuate his memory in some way, either by the naming of a peak for him, or by attaching his name to some recreational area along the magnificent thoroughfare. It would be a fitting gesture? and cause us to remember his help, which all too many of us were on the way to forgetting.

SINCE WHEN?

There seems to be a considerable demand over the country for the adoption of the Hoover report in the interest of a more smoothly functioning Federal government. At the same time the former President is quoted as "demanding" a build-up of sea and air power, looking to the eventual return of the troops from Europe, and we find more and more newsmen and commentators looking to Mr. Hoover as something of an authority on government.

And he may be. We have all the respect for Mr. Hoover that any good citizen should have for a President or former President of the nation. But those who stood in the soup lines twenty years ago, and watched the ship of state floundering in a depression which threatened revolution, are inclined to think that Mr. Hoover can't qualify as exactly an expert when the little matter of saving a nation is in question.

At any rate Queen Elizabeth ascends the English throne, 350 years after Elizabeth the First ruled. And the young, beautiful and talented daughter of George VI, trained through the years for her ruling role, ascends the ancient throne, which curiously enough governs a country which is now about as shaky as was England when the steadying hand of the Good Queen Bess brought the empire to new eras of greatness. And we shall entertain the hope that Elizabeth II will be the answer to an embattled empire's prayers, and that England will again stand strong and unafraid among the nations of the world. Long live the Queen!

(Salt Lake Tribune)

The marriage boom appears to be over. The Statistical Bulletin estimates that there were 1,580,000 marriages in 1951, a decrease of about 5 per cent from the preceding year. Mar-riages hit an all-time peak in 1946. Then a de-cline set in, lasting until the outbreak of the Korean war in June, 1950, when there was an upturn, which continued until last March. Since the number of marriages has dropped every month and in October and November of 1951 the rate was at a lower level than in the like period of any year for more than a decade.

There are two good reasons to expect the decline to continue for some time. First, the number of single persons has been reduced by the spurt of marriages following World War II. Second, fewer young people will come of age in the next few years as a result of the low birth rate during the 1930s.

Even leap year may not have its traditional effect. But that's to be expected, for the tradition is a myth. Only twice since the Civil War period-in 1896 and 1920-has the leap year marriage rate been higher than in the preceding and following year.

W.N.C. SHOULD HONOR MEMORY OF MR. ICKES

(Waynesville Mountaineer)

One of the best friends Western North Carolina had in the cabinet in the past quarter of a ntury was Harold L. Ickes.

The former secretary of the Interior, which placed him at the head of the Park and Parkway, proved time and time main that he was a friend this area.

It was Mr. Ickes who gave the decision for the 450-mile route of the Blue Ridge Parkway from Virginia to the Great Smokies. It was a hard fought battle between North Carolina and Tennessee over the route the Parkway should follow. The hearing was held before Secretary Ickes, and a train load of Western Tar Heels were on hand to present their case. The able presentation of the North Carolina route by R. Getty Browning, chief locating engineer of the highway department, made a profound impression on Mr. Ickes.

A special committee of engineers made a trip through here inspecting the route, and the they were in Waynesville the rain fell steady, and the coluds hung low over the towering mountain peaks. Many a civic leader felt that the chances of getting the route into North Carolina was over. But Secretary Ickes held steadfastly to the fact that the Parkway was designed to be a scenic road, and he ruled on the route as we know it today. Western North Carolina deserves to honor the memory of the man who gave this section so much. It would be indeed fitting that some high peak along the Parkway be selected to carry his name down through the ages. He was a man who did not seek honors during his lifetime, hence the memorial now would be timely, and certainly deserved.

Garden Time By ROBERT SCHMIDT

Vegetables are generally group-ed or classified in one of three ways: 1-according to botanical families, such as the lilly family which includes onions, garlie, leek and chives.

2-according to the plant used for food, such as beets, carrots and parsnips which are root crops. And, 3-according to the vegetable's ability to withstand low temperature.

This last grouping is probably of greatest importance to the average gardener because it concerns the survival and success of his crops. According to their ability to withstand low temperatures, vegetables are classifield as hardy, half-hardy and tender. The hardy vegetables are those that will not be damaged by moderate to hard frost after they have been planted. This group includes turnips, spinach, garden peas, mustard, radishes, lettuce, cabbage, kale, onions and endive The half-hardy vegetables are those which thrive in cool weather but are often severely damaged by moderate frosts or even light frosts after they are up. This group includes beets, chard, carrots, cauliflower, broccoli and elery.

The tender vegetables are those that will not withstand any frost and will not grow at their best until the weather gets quite warm. This group includes, snap beans, lima beans, tomatoes, peppers, eggplant, cucumbers, melons, squash, okra, New Zealand spin-ach and corn. There is some variation in hardiness within the groups and even between varieties of the same crop. The black valentine variety of snap bean is more hardy to cool temperatures than others, smooth seeded garden peas may be planted earlier than wrinkled seeded varieties. Cucumbers will withstand cooler temperatures than melons. Snap beans will withstand cooler soil temperatures than lima beans and,, therefore, may be planted earlier.

REMOVES HIS "WORRY" Brussels-When Mr. Desmet awoke early, he found that his wife had locked herself in the kitchen. When she finally let him in, his saving of 10,000 francs ($2,000) were only ashes in the stove. "We won't have to brother about that money any more," she assured him. Now, Mrs. Desmet is in a mental hospital.

"THE KING IS DEAD . . . "

King George VI, the shy, stammering British monarch, the lad who didn't want to be king at all, but whose love for England was greater than his desire for freedom, died the other night, and now the mother country is in the midst of the intricate proceedings, which have through the ages characterized the funerals of her kings, and the crowds gather about the several palaces, and weep openly for the head of the Government. For, say the people, the King "was a good man." And they weep again, and the streets of the city are stilled as the sorrowing subjects pay tribute to the crown . . . the symbol of the country they love so much.

And in this country there's a good deal of interest in this story of the death of a good man who took on an unwanted burden many years ago, and who carried through in the best traditions of the royal family. We marvel at the respect the people of England have for their government, for the love they have for the land it rules, and their mass obedience to authority, and to the seemingly pointless pageantry which has been handed down from the remote centuries . . causing us to wonder why general respect for authority hasn't been a typical
