EASTER REFLECTIONS

Easter, the day of resurrection and hope, of Easter eggs and fine and hope, of Easter eggs and fine Rotarians To good food, dawned rainy, and prevented many from going to Hear Lovejoy the Cone Manor House for the early service, where the roll of drums and the sound of trumpets heralded the sunrise, and proclaimed the risen Lord . . . Others trooped to their churches in increased numbers to hear the songs of praise and the preachments of the doctrines of the Nazarene.

THE GLAD AWAKENING The anniversary of the resurrection of the Lord, coincides happily with the awakening of the seeds and the bulbs and the trees, the coming of the first violets and the blooming of the daffodils, and the immortality of man finds expression in the re-birth of all the wonders of nature . . . The bright blooms, the fresh green gress in the backyard, the blossoms of the fruit trees, giving promise of rich harvets . The birds casting about for nesting places in the assurance that warmer days are here . . The lengthened days and the warm showers, and the rich black earth sliding away from the moleboard, as the plowman, reins around waist, makes ready for the new crop . . . Sermons are on every hand in this happy day of beginning again, and soon the earth will be covered with leaves and plants and grass, and posies. and the long winter sleep will have ended.

THE GAY PARADES

And people, mindful of the rebirth of the plants and the trees, and happy in the thoughts of the pleasant days ahead, come forth in their best bibs and tuckers, fill the churches, and parade along the streets and avenues, children and director of student happy as the birds, who seen to have done a bit of extra preen-Boone

BULLETIN

Mr. Hunter gave a brief resume of the purpose and meaning of the drama, which spans the decade from 1770 to 1780, a period which witnessed a complete metamorphosis in the thinking and convictions of the pioneers in three distinct categories: 1.
