Cherry Tarts Provide Neat Washington Birthday Treat

Whether the legend about George Washington and the cherry tree is founded on fact or fancy, it gives children and grownups plenty of thoughts about cherries in February.

George Washington Tarts make an excellent treat for youngsters and dessert for grownups on February 22, and they are easy to prepare when made with self-rising flour.

Self-rising is the flour that reduces oven failures almost to the vanishing point, because the baking powder ingredients and salt are expertly mixed into quality flour by the miller. It makes baking easy, since it is necessary to add only shortening and liquid to make a pastry.

Decorations can be a little tree, reminiscent of that one Washington so honestly confessed cutting down with his little hatchet. Or they can be a hatchet, or even a Washington tri-cornered hat cut out of pastry or made with whipped cream.

• George Washington Tarts
1 No. 2 can pie cherries or 1 lb. frozen cherries*
¼ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon almond extract

Pastry tarts made from:
1½ cups sifted self-rising flour
¼ to ½ cup shortening
¼ cup cold water (about)

Drain cherries and heat juice to nearly boiling. Mix sugar and cornstarch and stir into hot juice. Continue to cook until mixture is clear, stirring constantly. Remove from heat, add drained cherries, and allow to cool. Pour into previously baked tart shells and chill. Garnish top with baked pastry cut-outs or with whipped cream. Yield: 4 large tarts.

*If frozen cherries are used, reduce sugar to ¼ cup.

To make pastry tarts:
Measure flour into small mixing bowl. Cut in shortening with pastry blender until size of coarse corn meal. Sprinkle the cold water over the mixture and blend lightly. Shape into a ball, roll in waxed paper and let rest 10 minutes. Divide into four equal portions, roll each to ¼ inch thickness and fit into tart shells. Bake in hot oven, 450° F., for 10 to 15 minutes. Make pastry cut-outs from trimmings and bake on cookie sheet while tart shells are baking.
