Parks Enjoyed By Travelers

New parks, roadside tables, and improved highways in North Carolina are bringing appreciative responses from tourists.

Director Ben E. Douglas of the Department of Conservation and Development says the volume of "thank you" notes received from travelers is increasing. He released the following letter, from Mrs. F. M. Tench, Jr., of Oak Ridge, Tenn., as typical of letters being received by the State Advertising Division, which has charge of tourist promotion:

"We had the pleasure of driving practically the full width—West to East of your State over the 4th of July week end. We spent the weekend lamping at Cape Hatteras National Seashore Area. Our impressions of North Carolina are nothing but the best and we felt we should pass the word along. Your roadside tables were numerous and always well kept. We had occasion to stop at a roadside park near Statesville and were equally impressed by its facilities and cleanliness. You surely

NO BACKSEAT DRIVER

Must have your native residents well trained and impressed by their resources in order to keep them in such good conditions. We were amazed at your good highway system and the general feeling of well-being throughout the State. Everything looked prosperous.

We plan to again return to North Carolina and take advantage of your parks and those of the National Park Service, and hope we shall continue to be so impressed."
