

Washington News

Washington, D. C.—President Eisenhower, who believed he could come to terms with Senator William Knowland of California three years ago, after the death of the late Bob Taft, has signified his intention to fight still another battle with the presidential candidate—concerning the 1960 presidential election.

It may be denied by Senator Knowland and the President have never settled down to the close harmony and cooperation that is desirable between the President and his Senate leader, and Knowland has failed to come around, as some in the White House had hoped he might, after years of nudging at the White House.

He remains a basic Taft-wing Republican, and his attitude on the Eisenhower program has been a handicap more than once to the modern Republicans fighting under the Eisenhower banner. Knowland, however, has strong support for his cause among other Republicans, not the least of it in the Senate itself.

And because the group who follow his philosophy are making a bold bid to take over the party at the 1960 convention, President Eisenhower is already making plans to head them off. He has reportedly told friends that he will exercise something of a veto power in the next convention. It is thought that the President is willing to submit a list of names, of prospective Republican nominees—and that any one of these men nominated will receive the active, speaking support of Mr. Eisenhower.

On the contrary, the President threatens to stay out of the campaign if someone who does not go along with his general philosophy is nominated. The main cleavage is in the field of foreign affairs, and Mr. Eisenhower is worried lest some of the old nationalism-isolationism of the past rears its head and takes over in the party.

day claims is part of France itself. The French claim is not the stronger of claims, for Africa is a Moslem country and there is a growing passion therein for independence.

In that country, the French are tying down huge quantities of military equipment and men and have weakened their NATO contribution to an insignificant level in order to suppress the terrorism in Algeria. But the latest reports indicate the French are making no progress.

In fact, the murder of a prominent Algerian in Paris a few days ago highlighted the cause of the rebels, who had placed this famous Moslem on the assassination list because he had favored Paris' control of Algeria. And reports from Tunisia indicate that the strength of the rebels in Algeria is as strong or stronger, than ever.

French claims of victories, it is said, against the terrorists, actually represent the number of Arab civilians killed in a raid on some town or village, these sources say. And the rebel seem to have plenty of arms. The rebels claim they get much of their equipment from French deserters, but much of it reaches them from Tunisia, it is believed, also.

A year ago French military authorities were saying the end of the guerrilla war in Algeria was in sight but now they only claim the situation is improving. Many doubt that.

From Moscow the news is that Nikita Khrushchev has become an even stronger figure in the Communist regime than he was a year ago. It will be remembered that sensational stories were circulated about Khrushchev and his drinking, and predictions made that he was on the way out, not too long ago.

The contrary is true. Khrushchev is active and is the most influential official in the finance program, the agricultural program, the heavy industry program and in many other fields of government in Moscow. More and more, he speaks out on the major changes and intentions of the government in various fields.

While he is not expected to stage a coup, and become another Joseph Stalin, he is thought to be more firmly entrenched today than ever before—as the top man in Moscow.

BUSINESS PICKUP

A business-outlook session of the Commerce Department's Business Advisory Council, meeting recently in Hot Springs, Virginia, saw signs that the economy is gathering strength for a gradual rise in business activity for the rest of 1957. Total production of goods and services is seen to be rising slowly to a record rate of about $435,000,000,000 annually by the final quarter of 1957. That compares with $427,000,000,000 in the January-February-March quarter.

What Is Tuberculosis?

By MRS. FRANCES C. FRANCIS
What is Tuberculosis? To fight this disease successfully, it is necessary to understand it fully—what it is, how it develops, whom it strikes, and the weapons we have at our disposal to use against it.

Tuberculosis is a contagious disease caused by a germ called the tubercle bacillus. Although TB can affect other parts of the body, it strikes most often the lungs. Records of the disease date back to the dawn of history, but it wasn't until 1882 that the germ which causes Tuberculosis was discovered by the German physician, Robert Koch.

How does tuberculosis strike? Tuberculosis spreads from person to person. It is not inherited; no one is born with it. The disease is picked up only from someone who has TB by: 1. breathing air with TB germs in it. (People who have tuberculosis may spread the germs by coughing, sneezing, or spitting.) 2. Carrying germs into the mouth on fingers, food, eating utensils; by kissing someone who has active tuberculosis, or in some other way.

Tuberculosis can strike anyone, anywhere, any time—it can kill at all ages. However, more deaths and more new cases occur in middle and old age than among younger people. It also affects about twice as many men as women.

Poor general health lowers the body's resistance to TB germs. Frequent exposure to infections, inadequate diet, poor housing, and other health and social problems make it possible for the germs to gain a foothold, because the body is unable to overcome the infection. People living in crowded homes and neighborhoods are also in greater danger from tuberculosis because they have more chances to come in contact with those who have active TB. Among the people who are hit especially hard by the disease are American Indians, Negroes, and Americans of Spanish descent.

There are usually no symptoms in the early stages of tuberculosis. A person may feel well and yet be sick with TB. This is the time when the disease can be most easily cured.

When signs do appear, it may mean that the disease has entered an advanced, more difficult stage. Symptoms may include one or more of the following: excessive fatigue, loss of appetite and weight, frequent colds, chronic coughing, fever, indigestion, night sweats, and spitting up of blood.
