Paralytic Polio Is Said To Remain Threat

The current polio epidemic in Detroit, Mich., is a vivid reminder that paralytic polio will remain a threat to every community in the nation as long as millions of Americans neglect vaccination. Dr. Gene Reese, chairman of the Watauga County Chapter of the National Foundation, declared today.

"What is happening in Detroit could happen here," Dr. Reese said. "There are far too many unvaccinated individuals in our county and many others who have had only one or two shots. While expanding our program to take in arthritis and birth defects, we must not lose sight of the third danger of crippling—polio. It is still with us."

By the end of September more than 650 persons had been stricken with polio in Wayne County (Detroit), half of them paralytic, and more cases were being reported each day, the chapter chairman revealed.

The Wayne County Chapter of the National Foundation has purchased 100,000 shots of Salk vaccine for large-scale group vaccination programs throughout the county and also is supplying large quantities of needles and syringes for use in the program. Chapter volunteers are assisting doctors of the Wayne County Medical Society in the operation of the group centers.

"We have been fortunate in our county this year in that the polio rate has been light," Dr. Reese said. "However, with many of our children and young adults unvaccinated, we are probably as susceptible to an outbreak as Detroit."

The Wayne County Chapter of the National Foundation is now spending almost $50,000 per week on care of the victims of the epidemic, and the chapter estimates
