Speaking Of Golf

By JOE MAPLES

Heavy rains during the past week did some damage to several greens we were making repairs on. Some of the new top soil we were filling old washes with washed out. These places will have to be re-worked and of course this is going to delay the healing process somewhat, but we are in hopes that it won't cause any delay in the opening of the course.

While waiting for opening day, local golfers are carrying on with their games at Linville and Blowing Rock. These two courses are rapidly becoming in excellent condition and they are looking forward to their best seasons yet.

Gene Staut, pro at Linville, is expected around the first week in June. Roy Tinsley at Blowing Rock has been in town since early April working hard to get his course in good shape. It's possibly in the best condition it's been in, thanks to Roy's tireless efforts.

Glenn Wilcox, one of Boone's more active golfers is playing the best golf of his life at the present time. He's had several rounds in the 70's recently, and got most of the local players on the run.

Horace Dowling, one of Boone's better golfers, has been in somewhat of a slump lately, but it won't last long. We all have these things and Horace is working hard at getting out of it. He is probably the best putter in town and when his other shots are going well he is hard to beat.

Jerry Coe has been fighting an awful "duck hook" recently, but Sunday he seemed to have gotten the best of that monster.

Rapid progress is being made on the Golf Shop and locker rooms at the Boone Golf Club. The roof will be completed this week with the finishing touches following close behind. We expect to have the shop open several days before the course.

A complete line of golf equipment will be carried, featuring a wide variety, from good economy clubs to the best you can buy.

Unknown to most people is the fact that a set of golf clubs should fit him or her just like a suit of clothes or a pair of shoes. Different people are different sizes, therefore requiring different size clubs. A man buys a coat with a certain length sleeve. Likewise, a lady buys a shoe with a certain width.

The same applies to golf clubs. There are a wide variety of lengths, weights, shaft flexibilities, grip sizes and balances available in golf clubs. These varieties are available to fit short people, tall people, strong people, heavyweights and lightweights.

A club suitable for a small lightweight person naturally is not suited for a large person.

To get the most out of the game, a person should have clubs fitted to him or her by their golf professional. He is the only man selling golf equipment who is qualified through training and experience to fit a person with a set of golf clubs.

Buying through a pro is no more expensive than any other outlet selling clubs, and in most cases you get service not otherwise furnished, in addition to having clubs you can have the uppermost confidence in.

In closing, let me say it is a pleasure being in Boone and being associated with the new golf club. I am looking forward to being of service to every person who plays golf in Boone.

Washington, D. C.—Recent developments in the Major League should not convince any baseball fan that the races in either Major League are over. Indeed, the Major League season includes some 150 games, approximately, and this means that the races are seldom decided before the last month or six weeks of the season.

A classic example of the temptation to write off teams occurred in the American League in the first two weeks of the season. Both the New York Yankees and the Detroit Tigers seemed mired in the winless column, especially Detroit. Ironically, New York had been picked to be a contender, some even thinking they would finish second.

In the weeks following the opening two weeks of the season, Detroit has indicated it might field a decent team, after all, under a new manager, and in recent days the New York Yankees have indicated they might not lie down and play dead—as some had concluded. To be true, most wise baseball men did not count the Yankees out at any time, but some fans were inclined to write the Yankees off as having "had it."

On the contrary, we believe the Yankees will be the team to beat in the American League, and that by July, or at the latest, early August, they will be either at the top of the League, or threatening, if not sooner. We make this prediction keeping in mind the fact that baseball is a game which is played over a six-month season. A lot can happen in such a long period of time.

In fact, it is not inconceivable that Detroit, which won only two games out of its first sixteen, or something like that, could wind up in the first division, or even as a challenger. Under their new manager, Jimmy Dykes, the Tigers have improved their record consistently, percentage-wise, and terrible as the Tigers' start was, it is not inconceivable that they should wind up in the first division, or among the leading teams.

In the National League, the Cincinnati Reds have emerged with enough pitching to defeat the Milwaukee Braves occasionally, and this is a new development. The race in the National League, which is traditionally close, could be highly interesting this year.

It might involve Milwaukee, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Cincinnati and Pittsburgh. If this is the case, it will make for an interesting season, and it will be good for baseball.
