Congressman Alexander Tells Of Abuses Foreign Aid Program

Representative Hugh Alexander, back home from a 5-week look at foreign aid projects, thinks it's time "some of those countries started helping us."

"Why some of them—West Germany, Great Britain and Japan—are better off than we are. Their budgets are in better shape. Their people are working. I don't mean their standard of living is as high but financially the government's better off."

The Congressman stated that in foreign countries where the United States is dumping billions of dollars in aid the competition is grave and frightening, to American business.

"Unless we find the answers to this problem of competition," Alexander said, "the United States will be forced out of the world market." "Right now," he said, "we cannot possibly compete with foreign business, with cheap labor, new equipment and streamlined methods."

"In Japan and other countries," Alexander said, "modern factories are turning out radios, household appliances, textiles, motors and automobiles. The workers are enthusiastic about their jobs and the management eagerly grabs every opportunity to get greater shares of the world markets."

"And they are going to ship as much as they can into the United States."

Regarding the foreign aid program, Alexander said he came home convinced that "we'd be much better off if we cut down the spending and confine our gifts to the things that help the people

Liming Proves Popular Here

More than the usual number of farmers will carry out the liming practice on their farms in Watauga county this fall, according to Vaughn Tugman, county ASC chairman. This is indicated by the large number of farmers who have filed requests for cost-sharing at the ASC office during the past few days.

The county committee has obligated funds for this practice for at least 1,000 tons of this material.

Farmers have found it is advisable in most cases to apply limestone in the fall on land to which grasses and legumes will be seeded in the following spring. It is often difficult for deliveries to be made in time since the seeding season is so short and weather conditions are uncertain.

It is also a good time to test the soil for lime and fertilizer needs for the next two years. If all recommendations of the tests are followed it is only necessary to take the tests every two years. It is a simple matter to follow the easy instructions and the time involved will be well recompensed by the results obtained.

Boxes and instructions are available at the ASC and other agricultural offices. The ASC office will mail your boxes to the testing laboratory free of any charge, and the report will be mailed back directly to the farmer.

Farmers still interested in carrying out the liming practice this fall should contact the ASC office at once.
