The Third Annual Blue Ridge Pro-Amateur Golf Tournament turned out to be the most successful ever held, both from the standpoint of number of entries and amount of prize money presented. Thirty eight teams for a total of 152 players from all over North and South Carolina and part of Virginia took part in the two day thirty-six hole event held last Wednesday and Thursday.

Leader of the first round was the team of pro Billy Hoover of Greensboro, Lyn Caveness and J. B. Webster of Greensboro and Roy Blanton of Boone, with a team score of 56, twelve under par and the lowest shot for both days. Hoover himself was low pro for the first day with a fine score of 67.

It was a different story the last round however as the team of Purvis Ferree, Bobby Galloway and Wiley Fleanor of Winston-Salem and Junior Wilcox of Boone shot their second straight score of 61 for a two day total of 122 to win by one shot over the Hoover team which ballooned to a 63.

The most excitement was produced by pro Joe Cheves who being the last man on the course, turned in a second round score of 68 to take the pro medal money away from Hoover and Jim Riggins who were in with a score of 140. Cheves 68 the last day gave him a total of 139 and gave him the pro medal money for the second year in a row. Joe seems to like this course, having shot 87 last year to win the medal. Cheves was about the only man the last day that shot a lower score, as the cool weather and light rain and tough pin placements made most scores go up a stroke or two.

Most of the players were generally in agreement that the course was in much better condition for the Pro-Am than it was back in June when the Carolinas Open was played and everyone that I talked to indicated that they had an excellent time during their stay in Boone.

Entry fees swelled the total purse of $1250 to $2750 which is close to being a record for a two day pro-am event in the Carolinas section.

Following is a complete list of winners, including the Pro-Am, the Pro medal play and the amateur medal play divisions.

Washington, D. C.—The case of the Washington Senators and the Los Angeles Angels is an interesting one, in light of the coming expansion of the National League.

The two teams, now finishing their first year of play in the American League, began the season with surprisingly perky teams. The Senators, with good pitching, made a race for the first division in the first half of the year.

Lacking punch and depth, they folded badly in the second half of the year and finally hit bottom in September, much to the relief of the Kansas City Athletics who had been in the cellar most of the year.

Los Angeles, also with surprisingly good pitching, held-up better than Washington and manager Bill Ringle was given a contract for 1962 this month. Los Angeles had a rocky start but came on later in the year and had a surprisingly competitive team.

Even considering Washington's collapse, the two teams proved they could win games and play competitive ball. This is important because some claimed the two teams, without more time to organize, could not fit into Major League play.

Washington may come up with a new manager, of course, and some fear that Micky Vernon's talents were not up to the tremendous challenge that faced the Senators in the last half of the year. Yet, Vernon did a creditable job at the beginning.

In summary, the new National League teams, at New York and Houston, will make the picture next year one of two-team leagues.

Houston already has signed Paul Richards as the general manager. And it would seem that Houston and New York have an even better chance than had Washington and

Mountaineers Win Grid Opener, 22-6

Bristol, Tenn. — Appalachian's Mountaineers swing into Carolinas Conference grid play this week after a 22-6 opening-game win over Emory & Henry here Saturday.

The Apps go to Asheville Saturday for a scrimmage that night with league foe Western Carolina. Kick-off time is 8 p. m. in Memorial stadium.

In their first tilt Saturday, the Boone-based lads spotted the Wasps a first quarter touchdown, then roared back with three TDs of their own in the final half. The victors took advantage of two breaks to score the clinching markers after driving 37 yards for the initial tally.

An Emory & Henry fumble deep in Wasp territory set up the second Appalachian score while a pass interception was largely responsible for the final tally.

The slow-starting Apps failed to pick up a first down in the opening quarter but came back with a high-speed offense in the final two periods. In the second period, the victors drove from their own 20 to the Emory & Henry 27 before being stopped on downs.

The losers mounted a 49-yard drive midway of the first quarter which brought them their lone touchdown. A 16-yard pass was the longest gain in the march, climaxed when fullback Ray Leadbetter went over from three yards out. The touchdown was set up by a pass interference penalty which gave the Wasps possession on the three-yard line. The try for point failed.

The Mountaineers wasted little time in crossing paydirt in the third period. A fumble recovery gave them the ball on the E & H 37 and in seven plays the Apps had a touchdown. Halfback Bill Bradley picked up most of the yardage in the drive, but it was fullback Jim Hayes who carried the final 10 yards.

Mike Chandler booted the point after to put the Apps ahead to stay. A fumble following an Appalachian punt early in the final period enabled the Mountaineers to take possession on the E & H 10. After a seven-yard loss on the first play from scrimmage, quarterback Eugene Styles found halfback Sandy Edwards open in the flat and the fleet back raced into the end zone untouched for the second TD.

Sherill Norville made it a two-point conversion by running over for the point after.

Trying desperately to get back in the game, Emory and Henry took to the air after the kickoff. However, an Appalachian defender plucked off one of quarterback Craig Harbrow's passes and returned to the E & H 33.

After picking up a first down on the 22, the Apps had another TD in two plays. The scoring play came on a 20-yard pass from Styles to Norville, who grabbed the ball which had been deflected by a teammate. Don Gardner's placement sailed through the uprights for the point after.

The Wasps were unable to move the ball following the kickoff and the game ended with the ball in Appalachian State's possession on its own 25.

Fullback Jim Hayes led the Appalachian ground gainers with 57 yards in 13 carries while halfback Bill Bradley picked up 51 yards in nine tries. The Apps completed three of eight passes, two of which went for touchdowns. Standouts in the line were tackle Larry Crutchfield and end Don Mauldin.

Bobcats' Gridiron Hopes Rest On Six Lettermen

Banner Elk—Lee McRae College gridiron hopes rest only on six returning lettermen and a host of inexperienced freshmen.

Coach Fred Dickerson's defending conference champions were riddled by graduation. The Bobcats have also suffered heavy losses during early practice drills.

Lettermen Jack Campbell, captain, and William Franklin may be sidelined with knee injuries. First string end Waightstill Avery will be out for the season with a double-fractured clavical and other minor injuries to players have plagued the Bobcat camp.

Lost from last season's roster are such greats as NJCAA All-American back, Terry Postell, co-captain from Andrews; Gary Thompson (deceased), outstanding end, extra point specialist and co-captain; and other stalwarts such as Don Martin, Chilhowie, Va., the first four letterman at LMC; Dewey McReynolds, St. Paul, Va., NJCAA All-American center; Mickey Deel, Abingdon, Va., All-Conference end; John McLeod, Augusta, Ga.; Billy Bowen, Kingsport, Tenn.; and Tommy Short, Saltville, Va.

The other two returning lettermen are backs Berry Newman, Augusta, Ga.; and co-captain Jim Bristol from Andrews. The freshmen will look to these men to spearhead the LMC attack.

Promising griders from the freshmen squad are: Bobby Farris, flashy speedster from Saltville, Va.; Billy Birchfield, Roan Mountain, Tenn.; Ken Raines, Abingdon, Va.; Jim Hughes, Clintwood, Va.; and quarterbacks Jim Gillenwater, St. Paul, Va.; and Jimmy Parks, Saltville, Va.

Rugged freshmen linemen are headed by big Kirby Toney, 225 lb. center, Marion; Doug Bryson, 260 lb. tackle from Dublin, Va.; Bill Kirby, 260 lb. tackle of Narrows, Va.; Dickie Williams, 175 lb. guard from Bassett, Va.; Raymond Lazor, 167 lb. linebacker from Canton, Ohio; and 190 lb. The Appalachian High School Blue Devils took the field Friday night looking great and looked great all night, winning over Ashe Central by 37-6.

The game was a complete success but for injuries to Robert Matheson and Jim Agle.

The Blue Devils were aided by the rousing exhibition of halfback David Dougherty who scored two of Appalachian's touchdowns. Appalachian was hurt because of injuries but Ronnie Hunt and Alton Johnson played excellent ball as replacements.

COW WASH
 Artesia, Calif.—Someone must have figured the one minute car wash would be adaptable to more than cars.

Joe Albers worked out a handy contraption that is doing a real slick job on his dairy farm.

The device works similar to the car wash. The cow enters a walled runway, where spring valves turn on a shower of water. The state law in California requires that all dairy cows be washed each day.

Doctor Talk

By JOHN E. REMBERT, M. D.

Medical Science, through the constant work of thousands of researchers is now ready to eliminate one of man's most common ailments—measles.

It is estimated that approximately 1,000,000 cases occur annually in the United States with a minimum of eight million days of illness resulting from the disease. Heretofore, everyone had measles and its period of disability and discomfort accepted as inevitable.

Now, thanks to Drs. Enders and Peebles and their co-workers, a measles virus vaccine has been developed and tested for the past 2 years with very satisfactory results.

Drs. Enders and Peebles isolated the measles virus and successfully grew this virus in tissue culture and derived an attenuated live virus vaccine for human injection.

Testing with this live measles virus vaccine shows that approximately 6 to 8 days after administration of the vaccine a low-grade temperature develops lasting about three days; some of the tested individuals developed a rash, but none to the extent seen in clinical cases of measles; some of the tested group developed cough and coryza as seen in measles, but only minimal when compared to the average case of measles.

At this time it appears that perhaps only one vaccination with the measles vaccine will be needed—as those immunized two years ago show adequate neutralizing antibody titers. Obviously, however, the possibility of further booster vaccination doses will be determined as time passes and clinical evaluation continues.

KEEN SENSE OF SMELL
 West Glacier, Mont. The out-of-state visitors locked their food securely in the trunk of the car before taking a stroll in Glacier Park.

Out for a stroll, too, was a big black bear. He detected the scent of the food through the back window that was left slightly cracked. The owner, Paul Forton, of Howell, Mich., returned to find the bear had broken the window out of the car and was burrowing through upholstery and springs to get at the goodies left in the trunk.

Government is tightening its ethical codes.

Ritual purity assumed enormous importance in the lives of the Hebrews, the ancient Jewish sect which preserved and concealed the Dead Sea Scrolls. The famous Qumran community contained many cisterns and basins. According to the Jewish historian, Flavius Josephus, the Essenes bathed daily to purify themselves.
