

Recreational Facilities Will Be Improved In State—Freeman

Asheville—U. S. Secretary of Agriculture Orville Freeman Tuesday revealed plans by the Forest Service to improve recreation facilities in North Carolina in cooperation with the State Wildlife Resources Commission.

He said: "We plan—through stream improvement and stocking—to make fishing better on 250 miles of trout streams; to improve the hunting opportunities on 100,000 acres by planting food and cover. To further help the hunter, we are going to build 100 miles of special access trails."

Freeman spoke, along with Gov. Terry Sanford, at the Golden Anniversary Celebration of the Weeks Law, which created the Forest Service. The law provides for the purchase of land for the protection of forest. Pisgah National Forest near here was the first such federally-purchased tract.

Sanford noted that North Carolina's interest in forestry is not surprising "when we consider that of the 31,267,000 acres of land in North Carolina, more than 20,075,000 are occupied by forests."

Freeman said the federal and state governments also plan 3,500 new units for family picnicking and camping, complete with fireplaces, tables and other facilities. "I don't have to tell you what a tremendous attraction these public forests in North Carolina provide for you who live here and for your visitors from every state in the union," said the secretary of agriculture.

"The national forests are a powerful magnet pulling, in ever-increasing numbers, hunters and fishermen, picnickers and other outdoor enthusiasts of every kind.

Sanford said a great effort will be required if North Carolina is to make the most of its opportunities in the forestry field. "And we are prepared to expend that effort."

Annual Magazine Sale Starts At High School

Appalachian High School began its annual magazine sale today (Wed.) This project, which began about fifteen years ago, has grown steadily each year. A large number of the families in and around Boone depend on this service for their magazines.

Last year the school sold $4,000 worth of magazines, and this year the goal is $4500.

According to the teachers working with the sale, the magazine event is more than just a project to raise money. The students organize and carry out this project through the student council. The officers of each of the fifteen homerooms organize their rooms, collect the money, award the prizes, and keep accurate records of the sales.

Two members of the student body act as chairmen of the project and work with the homeroom officers.

The students determine how the proceeds of the sale will be used. In previous years the proceeds have gone to purchase new curtains and drapes for the auditorium, mirrors for the rest rooms, inter-communication system and automatic bell system for the school, electric water coolers, audio-visual equipment.

Last year the proceeds were used to purchase science, math, and foreign language materials under the National Education Defense Act.

This is the only project the school sponsors to raise money, and the students and faculty are appreciative of the response by parents and friends in the school district.

Brooks Speaker At Beta Club Meet

The Reverend Boyce Brooks was guest speaker when the Appalachian High School Beta Club held its first regular meeting of the year Monday in the school library. Mr. Brooks discussed his experiences in Great Britain this summer.

The following officers were installed during the meeting: Edward Brown, president; Amelia Luther, vice-president; Kathryn Mast, secretary; Evelyn Edmisten, publicity chairman.

The president appointed committee members to plan the Beta Club activities. The executive committee includes Amelia Luther, chairman; Ruth Ellen Moretz and Sammy Sink.

Serving on the program committee are William High, chairman; Patsy Beshears and Patty Robinson.

Carolyn Hoover is chairman of the social committee, and working with her are Polly Clawson and Tommy Taylor.

Mrs. Lera Randall is faculty sponsor of the club.

Cook Ranks High In Scholarship

Dr. Roy R. Blanton, principal of Appalachian High School, announced this week that Robert F. Cook has been named a semi-finalist in the 1961-62 National Scholarship competition. Cook is among the 10,000 seniors in the country who scored highest in their states on the test of educational development given last March.

Cook who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis C. Cook, left Appalachian High School at the end of his junior year and is enrolled as a freshman at King College, Bristol, Tenn. He will take another examination in December to enter the final round of competition for scholarship awards sponsored by about 130 business corporations and the National Merit Scholarship Corporation.

If Cook scores high on the final test and is named a merit scholar, he will be eligible for financial assistance even though he has already entered college, Dr. Blanton said.

Gloves are definitely longer than they have been in recent seasons. With formal evening gowns the smartest ones are those that reach above the elbow. With suits or fall frocks having sleeves above the wrist gloves are worn that can reach to the cuffs.

TY BOYD

Plans For AHS Career Day Made

Plans are underway for the Appalachian High School Career Day, which will be held on October 25. Letters have already been mailed to a number of persons, requesting that they serve as consultants for different occupations.

In reply to a request made by Mrs. Lera Randall, sponsor of the Beta Club which makes arrangements for Career Day, Wade St. Clair, program manager of WBT, Charlotte, has written that Ty Boyd will be present to conduct a discussion group on radio and television announcing.

Quoting from the letter from Mr. St. Clair: "Ty is the newest addition to our WBT staff, and... is one of the replacements for Grady Cole in our morning lineup. Not only is he an excellent announcer, but he has had strong experience in station sales and management. Therefore, you will find that he is most able to discuss any phase of broadcasting with the students."

"Ty came to us from the station in Chapel Hill, and he worked closely with the communications school at the University. So, he will be able to impart his practical knowledge of the challenges and opportunities for those contemplating broadcasting as a career."

"Ty is no stranger to Carolina listeners and viewers. In recent years, he has MCed the Jim Tatum Show and the Jim Hickey Show, as well as the Miss North Carolina Beauty Pageants. Presently, he and ex-Wake Forest Coach, Paul Amen, present a 15-minute weekly sports program that is carried by 10 North Carolina radio stations."

A spokesman for the Beta Club says it feels extremely lucky in securing the services of Mr. Boyd for Career Day.

Local Librarians Are Invited To Tenn. U.

Mrs. Ila Justice and Miss Eunice Query, associate professors in the department of library science at Appalachian State Teachers College, are two of three library science teachers in North Carolina, to be invited to participate in the Southeast Institute on Library Education at the University of Tennessee October 12-14.

Mrs. Justice will be one of the group discussion leaders during the three-day meeting. She will discuss courses involving selection of books and materials as taught in various schools and departments of library science in the southeast area which includes schools in Florida, Georgia, Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Virginia, Alabama, North Carolina, and South Carolina.

Miss Query will serve as recorder for the Practice Work discussion group. She said, "The purpose of the Institute, sponsored by the Library Education Committee of the Southeastern Library Association, is to develop course outlines for a basic core of library science courses which will provide a foundation for articulation of undergraduate and graduate programs in the southeast."

"There will be six different discussion groups on October 13, each one considering the content of courses at the undergraduate level in one field. Notes on the discussion groups will be edited and possibly published in the Southeastern Librarian."

Bankers To Join 4-H In Support Foundation

North Carolina bankers will join hands with 4-H Club members during October in supporting the educational programs of the National 4-H Club Foundation. Leading this drive for the fourth consecutive year is Wayne A. Corpening, vice president of the Wachovia Bank & Trust Company, Winston-Salem.

Corpening's appointment was made by Jesse W. Tapp, chairman of the board of the Bank of America, who heads the bank program for the National 4-H Sponsors Council. Sixty-three North Carolina banks participated in this program in 1960, an increase of nearly 25 per cent over the previous year.

This campaign enables bankers to broaden their traditionally strong local support of the 4-H Club program, Corpening believes. The National 4-H Club Foundation carries on a broad program of "Service to Youth" activities in citizenship education, leadership development, the International Farm Youth Exchange, and operation of the National 4-H Center in Washington, D. C. Most recent project undertaken by the Foundation is a one-year study leading to expansion of science training through 4-H Club work.

Corpening indicated that two North Carolina young people are now in Europe as IFYE delegates, representing the best of American rural youth. They are Lucy Evangelina Linney of Tyrone, who is now in Scotland, and Jane Harris Owen of Seagrove, who is in France. They will return to the state in late November, and spend several months sharing their experiences and observations.
