Raleigh — Three more Tar Heel celebrities have told Gov. Terry Sanford they will come to North Carolina for a special "recognition ceremony" this month during the North Carolina International Trade Fair in Charlotte.

The three latest acceptances bring to seven the number of Tar Heel stars of the performing arts who will be on hand for the Sunday night salute (April 28).

The latest three, all of whom are headquartered in Los Angeles, are: Andy Griffith, star of television's "Andy Griffith Show" who also has starred in a number of stage and screen successes.

Anne Jeffreys, popular Hollywood and television actress whose last count was 43 movies, 15 plays and stage musicals, and more than 100 TV appearances.

John Scott Trotter, veteran band leader, musical score arranger, and show personality.

The four who earlier told the governor they will return for the special ceremonies are:

POPULARITY POLL

According to a new United States Information Agency poll, the popularity of United States foreign policy has hit a record high among West Europeans but the Soviets score with striking gains.

The recent rise in pro-Russian sentiment was attributed to "the avoidance of war over Cuba—which may in Europe attribute more to Soviet moderation than to United States strength."
