Jaycees Choose Project

The Boone Jaycees met Monday night at the Daniel Boone Inn and decided that their main project for the coming year will be promotion aimed at obtaining a convention center in or near Boone.

Incoming President Bill Stallard, who will be installed at the organization's first May meeting said, "Boone is ideally suited, with plenty of facilities to support a center as proposed. Presently there is no place such as we propose for convention-type meetings, and one is badly needed."

The proposed center would also had rooms for clubs in the area to hold meetings, Jaycee Stallard said.

The Monday meeting was presided over by President Ned Trivette, and he appointed a committee to study the situation, and to meet Friday to discuss with the present board of directors and the one for next year just how the promotion may be carried out.

Boone Optimist Club Recognizes Winners In Oratorical Contest

One hundred and twenty-five Optimists representing seven cities in Zone 8, District 18 of Optimist International, were guests of the Boone Optimist Club Monday night for the Zone Oratorical Contest.

Sherwin Suddreth (center) of Lenoir was the first place winner, and will represent Zone 8 in the District Oratorical Contest April 30 in Raleigh. Tommy Freeman (right) of Morganton was first runner-up and Douglas Martin (left) of Asheville was second runner-up.

Other contestants were Craig Austin of Boone, Dennis Herman of Hudson, Phil McBrayer of Shelby, and Larry Patrick of Kings Mountain.

Lieutenant Governor Al Somers of Morganton presented Suddreth with the Zone Trophy. The topic for the oratorical contest was "Optimism — Formula for Freedom."

During the meeting, which was held at the Elementary School Cafeteria and Auditorium, Governor Somers presented perfect attendance pins to A. E. McCreary, Club President, and Nick Staikas, vice-president for 5 years perfect attendance and to George Flowers, immediate past president of the Boone Club for two years perfect attendance.

Dougherty Tells Of Plan College Students Given Chance In Poverty War

Summer Work, State Service Are Provided

The North Carolina Volunteers are offering a unique opportunity to college students for summer employment and creative service to the state of North Carolina, according to Barnard Dougherty, vice-president and comptroller at Appalachian State Teachers College.

The North Carolina Volunteers were created by Governor Terry Sanford and other North Carolina leaders in an effort to cope with the long range causes of poverty in the state.

James T. Beatty, director of the North Carolina Volunteers, is offering 100 summer internships to qualified persons who will work in The North Carolina Fund's ten experimental community projects designed to break the cycle of poverty in North Carolina. Each participant will be given room, board and $250 for 11 weeks during the summer beginning June 10. Students will live either in college dormitories in the community or with families who are residents.

Dougherty said that there will be a training program in June for all participants. The program is designed to instruct the volunteer in all facets of his work on the local level and in techniques of community education and organization.

Any student in North Carolina colleges and universities is eligible to participate. Volunteers will help in a variety of ways such as conducting tutorial programs, running day care centers, assisting with health services and performing other tasks associated with alleviating the long range causes of poverty.

The North Carolina Volunteers hope that this summer's program will serve as the beginning of a large-scale volunteer effort throughout the state. Each volunteer this summer should be trained to exercise leadership in promoting and running similar projects on their campus and home communities during the 1964-65 academic year. This year's volunteer may also have an opportunity for a full-time paid internship in one of these community projects during subsequent years. They may also be called upon to assist in the recruitment and training of a larger volunteer force for the summer of 1965.

For additional information or application blanks, students are invited to inquire at the vice-president's office in the administration building on the Boone campus.

Horn Auditions Are Announced

Auditions for cast members to Horn in the West, will be held at the Daniel Boone Theatre, 2 p. m., June 12th.

No one under the age of 18 will be interviewed. Those interested in singing and dancing, are preferred, and perhaps will be the only positions open by this time.

Mr. Gene Wilson, director, will be in charge of the auditions. He reports that most of the cast has been signed.

The 1964 script has been received from Dr. Kermit Hunter, the author, and some very outstanding improvements are noted.

The 1964 version should be the best since the drama was first presented in 1952.

AHS Band To Appear In Concert; Will Compete In State Contest

The Appalachian High School Band will present a concert for the public Thursday evening, April 9, at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of the elementary school.

Boone's Ambassadors are scheduled to compete at the North Carolina State Band Contest to be held in Greensboro April 19. The band will bring to people in the Boone area the music they will perform at the state contest.

The Appalachian High School Band is comprised of sixty-three boys and girls in grades nine through twelve. These boys and girls take band as a regular school subject for which they receive one full unit of academic credit. The band serves the school and the community in a variety of ways. Early fall finds the band performing at football games, civic programs, and local parades. This year's band was the guest high school band at the Lees-

McRae Homecoming game and also performed for the ASTC Homecoming. As fall passes and the band moves indoors, preparation begins for a busy concert season. The highlight of the concert season is always the state band contest.

The forthcoming concert will feature such fine marches as Goldman's Chimes of Liberty, Karl King's The Hunters, and Jerry Bilik's Block M. From the 1964 contest list will be performed the first movement of Paul Fauchet's Symphony In B Cesar Franck's Psyche And Eros, Morton Gould's Ballad For Band, and Frank Erickson's Toccata For Band. The percussion will demonstrate a unique use for sandpaper Ballet, Eric Osterling's Beguine For Flutes will feature the entire flute section. To complete the program, selections will be played from the musical show (continued on page eight)

Apartment Owners In Boone Asked To Gather On Saturday

All owners of apartments in the community are asked to meet at the Daniel Boone Inn, Saturday, April 11, at 12:30.

One special purpose of the meeting is to arrange to have a complete list of apartments prepared with information that will help our visitors seeking apartments for the summer and next fall to locate the living space they want with as little trouble as possible.

rates being charged and agreements as to holding reservations, leases required, parking arrangements, and other needed information.

It has been suggested that an organization of apartment owners would be a good thing, or at least that there should be a meeting of these people once or twice a year.

initial meeting. Lunch will be served at 12:30. Anyone wishing to attend the meeting but not the luncheon may come at 12:45 or even as late as one o'clock.

The committee on arrangements is composed of Howard Cottrell, A. G. Campbell, Reynolds Hancock, Mrs. Rob Rivers and Stanley A. Harris. Those wishing further information may call any member of the committee.

Body Blowing Rock Woman Found In Cone Park Lake

The body of Mrs. Charles Isenhour, of Blowing Rock, was found Tuesday about 1 o'clock in Bass Lake in the Cone Memorial Park near the resort town.

Coroner Richard Kelley said the body was found by Sonny Foster, and it was estimated that it had been in the water for two hours. She had been seen last at 9:30.

Coroner Kelley termed the death an accident, since Mrs. Isenhour's shoes were found on the bank of the lake, indicating she was wading.

Mrs. Isenhour, who was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George W. Hayes of Boone, was 60 years old.

Funeral details or other information could not be secured at the Democrat press time.
