

THIS LOFTY VIEW OF THE TOWN OF BOONE shows most of the business section. The building in the lower left-hand corner is the Democrat office, and the residences on the hill opposite are on Grand Boulevard. Most of Depot Street and portions of both West and East King Street are seen here. The bare space in the upper left-hand portion of the picture is the city parking lot facing Queen Street.

The building in the lower left-hand portion here is the old City Hall structure. The Daniel Boone Hotel is seen partially about an inch higher. The long building about center is the Appalachian Theater and portions of the Boone Methodist and Baptist Churches are seen as East King stretches out to the right.

The third view shows much of the college campus: The burley Warehouse is in the lower foreground, and the former Appalachian High School is the rock building at the left. The

"Horn in the West" parking lot and the Blowing Rock Road can be seen in the upper right portion. (Staff photos)
