

May Is Being Observed As Senior Citizen Month

Public welfare in North Carolina is participating in the observance of May as Senior Citizens Month by calling attention to the needs of older persons and services available to them, said State Commissioner of Public Welfare R. Eugene Brown.

By proclamation, President Lyndon B. Johnson has designated this month as Senior Citizens Month. He has urged Federal, State and local governments; as well as private and voluntary organizations, to join in community effort to give meaning to the theme of the special month: "A New Day For The Older American".

Commissioner Brown pointed out that public welfare has broadened its medical services program for the aged. All persons eligible for old age assistance may receive medical services. Persons who are not eligible for welfare money payments may be able to receive medical services if they are medically indigent, he added. Dental services are also available to needy persons over 65 years of age.

In addition to financial assistance for the needy aged, public welfare has non-financial services available regardless of economic status. They include counseling to help the aged continue to live in their own homes, visits by caseworkers to licensed homes for the aged and family care homes to help operators meet residents' needs, homemaker services, and counseling with relatives to help them resolve plans for elderly relatives.

Commissioner Brown said the welfare of older citizens is one of the chief concerns of public welfare.

Retirement Official Will Address Local Teachers

The North Carolina Teachers' and State Employees' Retirement System Executive Secretary, Nathan Yelton, will address the teachers, administrators and other state employees on Monday, May 16, at 7:30 in the Appalachian Elementary School Auditorium.

The Classroom Teachers Association of Watauga County has asked their executive secretary to come to Boone to speak and answer questions.

The association invites all state employees in Watauga County to join them when Yelton speaks. He will discuss the retirement system and social security benefits. There will be a question and answer period after the address. Persons who have unusual problems or who are in doubt about the retirement fund or social security should prepare specific questions.

Carolina Conference at Durham, in 1908, was a member of the Boone church when he was a student at Appalachian. If he was then he, I and Lawrence Barden, who joined our Conference in 1953, are three who have gone into the ministry from that church. It is possible there might be another or two of whom I have no account.

My work has taken me into various parts of this Conference but always there was something special about Boone and the Methodist church that had a big place in my heart and mind. The church there gave me my first chance to try my limited powers and stood by me during those years. Not many of the original members are now on the earth, and I sometimes feel as if I were among strangers when I worship there. But it is a thrilling experience to see all those children and young people thronging the services to worship under the leadership of a young and able pastor and preacher. There is great hope for the church's future as long as many seek guidance toward satisfying Christian experiences and interest themselves in fruitful fields of service.

Know The Weather

BY E. H. SIMS
Can one foretell anything about the weather by carefully noticing the color of the clouds above?

The answer is that only very limited weather information can be detected from observation of cloud colors. The truth is, in fact, clouds have no color. It may be hard to believe but clouds are colorless.

Their apparent color results from reflection. The particles of moisture in a cloud reflect so much light at so many angles, they give a white appearance. Take away the sun, and clouds become darker objects on the earth below, too.

Little can be learned from watching the apparent color changes in clouds. Dark clouds on bright sunny days in summer do indicate a concentration of moisture so heavy as to blot out the light of the sun, and may indicate rain. But other color hues may mean only that certain clouds are at the moment reflecting colors from below, on the earth.
