is paid for money crops years and the lack of payment for labor on cotton, tobacco, peanut and truck farms has alarmingly decreased the buying power of the people in the rural district and consequently of the town people as well. The constant purchase of supplies that might be home produced is also a severe drain on the resources of our rural population. This situation, seriously affecting economic conditions in the entire South, has been reflected in hundreds of markets in which the with has been a large buyer.

the misfortune of farmers residing in the stricken areas of the has become a national calamity, and it is well that the Agricultural Adjustment Administration is striving to rescue these poor people; but it is a still wind that blows no good, and southern farmers are being lifted to higher levels of prosperity by certain policies of the AAA, by their own cooperation, and by the grace of God. Now these farmers have the opportunity as never before to stabilize agriculture, and to some extent industry, in this great agricultural region.

It is sure that all deplore the ills that have befallen our western neighbors and wish them a speedy recovery; but to those unfortunates whose fertile soil has been blown away and to the administration whose sad duty it may become to move these people to other locations, we should say, "If you must move, consider the South; cast your lot with us, for this is truly the Promised Land."

SAVES DOG FROM ROCK TRAP

Heroism of a colliery lad saved the life of a little dog at Bridgend, Wales. It fell into a pit at a disused coal level and was trapped behind a huge rock which could not be dislodged without bringing down tons of rock on the tiny prisoner. The dog was fed for three days on bits of food thrown through a crack, and then it was suggested that it would be kinder to put it out of its misery. Along came Frederick Burchell, 17, who at the risk of being crushed by the fall of stone, climbed over the huge rock, pushed himself under another, and brought out the pet safely.

Growers of Short Crop May Sell Others' Excess

Growers of flue-cured tobacco in North Carolina who have signed adjustment contracts with the government and whose production in 1934 is less than their allotment, may, if they care to do so, sell the flue-cured tobacco grown by other contracting growers whose production exceeds their allotment.

"This administrative ruling was signed by Secretary Wallace last week," says E. Y. Floyd of State College, in charge of the tobacco program in this State. "The decision was made when it was learned that in some sections, the production will be well below the quantity of tobacco allotted. Reports as to crop conditions from all sections indicate that the total-production of contracting growers will be approximately 50 million pounds below 80 percent of the base production which will be the quantity allotted to contracting growers and is the quantity for which tax-payment warrants could be issued. The most recent estimate of the crop is 526 million pounds."

Mr. Floyd points out any arrangements made between contracting growers to utilize allotment cards other than their own for selling tobacco is purely a private transaction. Contracting growers who produce in excess of their allotment will not be permitted to market this excess tobacco and pay the tax provided under the Kerr-Smith tobacco control Act but may arrange to sell this tobacco under another contracting grower's allotment card.

The non-contracting growers, unlike contracting producers, may sell tobacco produced in excess of any allotment given them, if they pay the tax of 25 percent of the market value as provided in the Kerr-Smith Act. They will not, however, be permitted to sell tobacco under the marketing card of a contracting grower, Floyd says.

HUMAN TARGET REALLY SHOT

What proved to be a real shooting in which a real bullet was used, gave an unexpected thrill to an audience in a theatre in Sydney, Australia, recently. The man on the stage who called himself the "human target," had promised to catch in his teeth a bullet fired by an assistant from a rifle 10 paces away. A marked bullet was placed in the rifle. A shot rang out. The "human target" was seen to stagger. He ran from the stage with blood pouring from a wound in the right shoulder. The curtain fell. Officials at the theatre denied afterwards that the wound was serious. The trick had been successfully performed before.
