WE ALL LIKE A CERTAIN AMOUNT OF FLATTERY

It must be human nature to like to be flattered or have folks say something nice about you. At least that's been the experience of the publishers of this newspaper during the past week and since the first issue was distributed.

We've had the most kindest words and thoughts expressed to us by word of mouth, by letters, telegrams and long distance telephone calls, and it wouldn't be true if we said we didn't like all these very fine compliments. However, we know something of a newspaperman's lot, and are aware that the future will not be a bed of roses. We've joined the others of our ilk, and to each one that wished us success and paid such high compliments, we want to say that we're willing and anxious to cooperate in any way possible with our fellow newspaper men, to the end that we might be of some service to them, as well as help us to be a credit to the community in which we've cast our lot.

Again, we want to thank everyone who has expressed an interest in our behalf, and only for the fact that it would appear that we're "tooting our own horn," we'd publish the compliments paid us in the past several days.

A WORTH-WHILE EXPENDITURE

It's a distinct credit to the city officials to have erected a traffic signal at the corner of Moseley and Queen streets this week.

That intersection for some reason seems just a little more dangerous than any in town. Several accidents have occurred at this point, and with increased traffic on the road leading from Chowan bridge into the city, the installation of a traffic signal may be the means of preventing very serious damage and injury—and possibly death. Who knows?

Authorities haven't expended the taxpayers' money for a light to decorate that particular intersection. It's been put there for the protection of life and property, and the Herald voices the hope that every motorist will abide by the regulations, and not pass the red light, even if they have reason to believe there is no traffic moving.

The police department has been notified to arrest violators, but would it not be a great deal better if every motorist would be governed by the signal and make the success of the traffic light voluntary rather than forced by the police?

AN UNFORTUNATE SITUATION

The call of a textile strike is an unfortunate situation at this particular time. Both sides (and it takes two sides for any argument) will suffer. At this writing both capital and labor would like the world to believe that their particular side of the argument is the stronger.

It is to be hoped that strikers will not take the attitude that the government will deliberately hand out money to meet their wants just because they have gone on strike.

The government has taken the stand that nobody in the country shall be hungry, but at the wages now received, workers could buy more than merely enough to satisfy the pangs of hunger.

True, textile workers may think that they have a hard lot, but who hasn't had a similar case during the past several years? The Herald believes that, without outside agitation, the textile workers would be a more satisfied people, and to go on strike at this time will hardly bring much benefit to them.

With the possibility that some of the mill owners would rather close their mills than to operate, it's too bad that another method beside a strike could not be found to settle the differences.

Oh, for the good old days when you could kiss a girl and taste nothing but girl.

Times are so much better, they say that some of the ex-technocrats have found jobs.

More men of standing would run for office if politics wanted men who stood anywhere.

If he says the world will be better off if he stays in his job...

HEARD AND SEEN

By "BUFF"

I'm in the same boat with D. B. Liles. The other morning Mr. Liles, who is the high cockalorum of Liles' 5, 10 and 25-cent store, was sweeping off the pavement prior to opening the store. I asked if he was promoted or demoted, and he informed me he had to do a little of everything these days. And that's just the thing I've been doing. Having advanced to the highest position in a newspaper office a couple of years ago, I became a tramp printer for a spell and now having again gained the title of editor, I find that it means being reporter, head writer, typesetter, make-up man and even sweeping up the floor and dragging out the trash box for the trash truck. But, shucks, what's that as long as we receive the compliments like we did last week on our first edition?

But speaking of that first edition, Hec Lupton and I do not wish to "hog" all the credit. Captain Leon Billington, our job printer was just as loyal as we were in getting out the edition. He worked hard and long, and he's the first fellow I ever saw feed a press while asleep. I don't know how he attained the title of "Captain," but if I can find out I'll sure let the cat out of the bag.

Well, baseball is over now, and we lost the league championship. But at that the management should be congratulated for being able to hold a team together that could play in the series, especially when three of the teams were forced to quit the league.

If you wanted to see anybody you knew you should have been at the game Sunday. A large crowd was on hand and familiar faces from all over this section of the State were there.

Even Charlie Swanner was there, and when Edenton made one run near the end of the game Charlie said it was like getting a nibble when a fellow was fishing all day without catching a fish.

I have a crow to pick with Mr. Sam Morris. He subscribed to the Herald and said this column always makes him laugh. I'm wondering if he means to infer that it is a "joke."

I've always wondered why folks who come to Edenton hate like the dickens to leave the town. But Doc Whichard tells me of a reason which he heard. He said the reason folks stay here is because after remaining here for awhile they get so consarn poor they can't get away. Well, I reckon the agony of starving to death isn't any more severe in Edenton than anywhere else.

One of the bus drivers sort of forgot himself the next day after the bus terminal was transferred from Hotel Hinton to S. C. Mills building. It's said that one of them drove up to the hotel and waited for passengers a few minutes before he realized the change had been made. Well, what's a few minutes? If you don't think those drivers can make up a few minutes, just take a ride with them when they are running a little late.

We've had many compliments on our first issue, and while none of them has gone to our head, we especially appreciate the one made by Jack McMullan. Jack, you know, is the grandpappy of the Edenton Daily News.

About the most pleased spectator at Sunday's baseball game was Ed Habit. It was raining, you know, and the folks just had to stay to see the game as long as the two teams played—get wet or not. As a result many suits had to be cleaned and pressed.

Paul Holoman has a stone in our office which we've used right much in doing job work. I understand he intends to make candy on the thing. All I've got to say is that he'd better make chocolate candy, according to the looks of the stone at present.

I sympathize with Mr. Roy Parks who lives up Ryland way. Just recently he lost a valuable horse of which he was particularly fond. Mr. Parks now carries a picture of the horse in his watch.

And speaking of watches, some of those Red Men Monday night said every newspaper man should have a watch. Well, I have one. It's hanging on the wall in the Western Union office. Have a look at the time!

C. E. Kramer, our genial postmaster, had a boat launching last week. He put his "Monkey Doodle" in the water for the first time and enjoyed a short ride in the bay. He, Oscar Duncan and Gilbert Hollowell carried the boat from its parking place on "Cheap Side" and dumped it overboard. Mr. Kramer was well pleased with the maiden trip of the boat, and now I'm trying to get up with him to get a boat ride.

Zeddie Perry of Bertie County, who sings high tenor in quartets in his neck of the woods, was at the ball game Sunday. Besides being a good singer, he's a gol darned good baseball roofer. But darned if I could figure out which team he was rooting for.

Then "Sheriff" Smallwood of Windsor was there, too, with a chair and cushion. One of the Bleacherites said he always takes his chair along when he goes to a ball game and a deer hunting trip.

Now that the Red Men have set September 17 as the date for their annual fish fry, I'll not have to eat for about two weeks.

Mrs. Julian Ward is now convinced that a dog has plenty of sense. Mrs. Howard Jackson, Mrs. Ward's sister, has a dog, Bob, which visited Mrs. Ward's home quite frequently and became very friendly. Even at the drug store Bob would always notice Mrs. Ward. However, George Case Ward persuaded his dad to buy a dog and from all appearances Bob became jealous. At any rate, now when Bob sees Mrs. Ward in the drug store he "high-hats" her.

Just 'tain't fair. The other day a fellow started to tell me something about Mr. Sam Morris, when the latter chimed in, "Don't you tell that now, or he'll have it written up in the paper." Have a heart, Mr. Sam!

REVIVAL MEETING CLOSURE AT ROCKY HOCK CHURCH

The revival services at Rocky Hock Baptist church closed Sunday night. Rev. Mr. Cole, who has been helping the pastor, Rev. Frank Cale, in the meeting, left the home of R. W. Leary, where he has been staying, Monday afternoon for Warwick Swamp church, where he will continue his series of meetings.

Visiting Mrs. Brunson Miss Mary Glenn Taylor of Robersonville, is visiting Mrs. W. C. Brunson on Church street.

Editor's Note: It is the desire of the Herald to publish a complete list of church services for all the churches in the county, both white and colored, but due to the various obstacles to be overcome in starting the publishing of a newspaper, this information could not be obtained in time. It will be greatly appreciated if this information is sent in either by the pastors of the churches or some member thereof.

Williamston Warehouse Friendly To Farmers

Chowan tobacco growers are solicited to bring their tobacco to the Planters warehouse in Williamston. This warehouse is in charge of J. Cozart, George D. Foxworth and Carlisle Langley, all experienced tobacco men, and they are highly recommended for fair dealing and doing their utmost to secure the highest price for tobacco placed in their warehouse. They pride themselves on the reputation that "once the farmers see us in operation, we make customers and friends quickly." They invite farmers to their warehouse to establish an acquaintance, whether they have tobacco to sell or not.

S. C. MILLS BUILDING AT KING AND BROAD STREET PAINTED

The building at the northwest corner of Broad and King streets which houses the new bus station and the S. C. Mills barber shop, is now being dressed up in a new coat of maroon paint, trimmed in white. The appearance of this corner in the main business section of the city has been very much improved by the painting of this building.

LABOR DAY LIGHTLY OBSERVED

LABOR Day (Monday) was lightly observed here. Aside from the Bank of Edenton and the post office, most business was carried on as usual.

Demonstration Clubs To Resume Schedule

Due to Miss Nelle Caldwell's activities with canning projects, her vacation and work on a special home demonstration and 4-H Club edition, the various clubs have had to miss one meeting. After September 15 all clubs will meet on scheduled days as they did before the summer months.

On Friday afternoon Miss Caldwell will meet with the advertising committee for a special edition, which is being planned to be printed by the Edenton Daily News. This committee consists of Mrs. Henry Goodwin, Mrs. Louis Goodwin, Mrs. Eze Ward, Mrs. R. B. Hollowell, Jr., Mr. J. E. Perry, Mrs. Percy Smith, Miss Margaret Dail, Miss Myrtle Parks, Mrs. Russell Byrum and Miss Nellie Davis.

YOUNG MEN OF CANAAN'S TEMPLE PLANNING BIG DAY

The young men of Canaan Temple Church are planning the last entertainment of the season for Monday, September 10.

At 2:30 several games of baseball will be played, the last games of the season. At 7:30 there will be a musical program furnished by the Weeping Willow and Mt. Olive quartets. Refreshments will be served both day and night and a large crowd is expected to attend.

Announcement

Having purchased the Barber Shop formerly owned by Mr. Pugh Roberson, located next to the Western Union office, I have removed from the shop in the Hinton Hotel Building.

In my new location I shall endeavor to give the same high class service as heretofore.
