

RAMBLING

Here, There and Yonder

BY THE RAMBLER

CARDINALS IN THERE

Without a doubt, the right to represent the National League against the Tigers of the American League. Cardinal fans can credit the St. Louis pennant win on Jerome and Paul Dean—the "Deans" of pitching. And they are not through yet, as the St. Louis management expects them to win four games between them. And the way they have been going, they have a good chance of satisfying the management. If they do come through, watch out for the braggarts next year.

Do you remember the Cards' shortstop in the last world's series? Gilbert's his name—Charlie Gilbert. Since then he has had a streak of hard luck, which almost ended his career.

He could have picked professional football as easily as he did baseball—being a star in both, with a perfect shape to fit his six-foot frame. But he took to baseball and delivered the goods for the Cardinals.

Then came the catastrophe. While hunting during the winter his gun went off accidentally and hit his leg. Everybody, including the doctors, practically knew his baseball career was over, for a baseball player without sturdy legs is like a bird with wings cut. Gilbert stuck in there and fought his wounds until they began to get better.

Late last summer, while visiting in a northern city I talked with him and asked him if he ever expected to play any more major league ball. He said that he expected to play this year. At that time he had to walk with the aid of a cane and his leg appeared to be in bad shape.

This spring he reported to the Cardinal camp but the managers did not seem satisfied with his leg and he has had to travel with them as a reserve.

But Charlie is still fighting his wounds, and people who try to beat odds like that are bound to win in the long run. The Cardinals have had to overcome odds that were almost as bad as Gilbert's, and even though they have had to fight to the finish and were also under a heavy strain, while the Tigers have been resting, they stand a good bet to kill the Tigers. But the odds are in Detroit's favor.

GO TO IT, BOYS

Coach House's high school eleven is in pretty good shape to tackle the Chowan College squad on the local gridiron Friday afternoon. The local boys have gotten off to an excellent start by defeating Suffolk 18-0 and Beaufort 14-0 in the two games thus far played. Chowan College is reported to have a very heavy team, but lacking somewhat in football experience. This will be the first game on home grounds, so here's hoping a large crowd turns out and helps the boys continue their winning streak. Reports are that Edenton this year has a team that will be hard for any high school team in this section to stop. Here's luck to them!

LOST DOPE BUCKET

Whew! Carolina came through with colors last week-end. Coach Snavely must have an extra good pass defense to halt the Wake Forest quarterback, Kitchin. None were completed out of eleven tries and five of those intercepted is a pretty low average for a passer.

Duke also upset the bucket when she defeated the strong V. M. I. team to the tune of 46 to 0, being high scoring team of the South.

TOBACCO AND POKER

With such happenings I think, well I don't know what to think. But I am considering raising tobacco next year. One of the auctioneers in a tobacco market told me that he sold some of the weed for 95 cents a pound. I thought I had misunderstood him, as he said it in his fast and run-together way. But he said the same thing slow.

This same auctioneer was in a poker game one night last week and with his fast, steady stream of noise he soon had all the money in front of him. The other boys, railroad employees and what-nots, decided to try his style of playing and began to gabber and talk. Well, between me and you, they never would make good auctioneers—at poker, anyway.

WHAT ABOUT THE BABE?

Wonder what the Great Babe Ruth will do next year? With his playing days over, about the only way he can attract the public eye is by appearing as a manager. What would you think if he was made manager of the New York Yankees and he would run them through to a world series battle next year? It is not impossible, you know. Mickey Cochrane did as much for Detroit in one year.

EXPLAIN SALES PROCEDURE FOR SCRAP TOBACCO

Sales Must Be Entered On Allotment Cards And Covered By Tax Payment Warrants

Sales of scrap tobacco by contracting producers must be entered on allotment cards and must be covered by tax-payment warrants, according to information received from the tobacco section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. Scrap tobacco, if sold from a crop grown under a tobacco contract, becomes a part of the grower's allotment. If the tax is paid on sales of any part of a contracting producer's crop, it will be in violation of the terms of the contract.

A bill of sale should be obtained by the grower if he sells scrap tobacco to a dealer in leaf tobacco or a processor of tobacco. The producer must then take the bill of sale and his allotment card to an agent of the secretary of agriculture issuing warrants at a warehouse. The agent will make the necessary entry on the allotment card and issue a tax-payment warrant covering the sale. The bill of sale, with the tax-payment warrant attached, is then returned to the purchaser.

If a contracting producer sells scrap tobacco to a person who is not a dealer or a processor, he must obtain a bill of sale, have the entry made on his allotment card, obtain the tax-payment warrant covering the sale, and make the report himself to the collector of internal revenue in his district. Forms and information about the filing of returns can be obtained from the office of the collector of internal revenue of the district in which the producer is located.

A grower violating the terms of his contract through improper disposition of his tobacco may have his contract terminated. If a grower's contract is terminated, he may be required to refund any previous payments in addition to being required to pay the tax upon the sale of the tobacco covered by the tax-payment warrants issued to him, according to the Agricultural Adjustment Administration.
