

RAMBLING WITH THE Rambler

By "LITTLE BUFF"

This And That

John Kilpatrick, president of Madison Square Garden, didn't make his trip to Europe to see the Olympic Games, so the inside story goes, but to make certain that Mike Jacobs, the Garden's contemporary New York boxing promoter and Twentieth Century club director, really had a contract on Max Schmeling that would give him the right to book on the now set title bout between the German and Champion James J. Braddock. . . . In the great speedboat classic for the Harmsworth trophy run recently, newsreel cameramen hint that the Britisher, Kaye Don, who won the race, sometimes ran as slow as 27 miles per hour when the last of the opposition was forced out of the event. . . . Charles Atlas, noted American physical culturist, says the grueling five-meet preliminary track program in this country for Uncle Sam's Olympic stars before they sailed for Europe is likely to cause a number of the performers to go stale from overwork before the Berlin events are over. . . . A former New York sports writer who promoted the national collegiate basketball tournament is said to have made $25,000 out of the deal. . . . Charlie Kimmel, one of the U. S. G. A.'s official scorers, can play one thousand different selections on his home-made one-string cigar box violin. . . . The latest addition to the Jack Dempsey family is due anytime now. . . . In states where the snow hangs around late as winter fades into spring the linkmen use red golf balls. . . . Ned Everhart, resident golf pro at the Miami Biltmore Country Club, once tried to knock down a golf ball in flight with a 20-gauge shotgun—but missed every time. . . . Strangest of the entries in the recent national public links golf championship was a wine taster. . . . While in a poll of the entries it was found that the average salary of the contestants was $22 a week, ranging anywhere from $5 a week to $9,000 annually. . . . San Francisco is so steamed up over Joe Di Maggio, Yankee's rookie star, that every time he makes a hit it is broadcast over the police system so the cops in the radio cars are not kept in suspense. . . . Notre Dame has already printed applications for its gridiron ticket applications for its gridiron games in New York with Army, and at Baltimore with Navy. . . . The Gotham prices are $4.40 and $6.60 with those in the Maryland city set at $1.11, $2.22 and $3.33. . . . Gerald Walker, Detroit outfielder, once appeared at the plate with all of his fingernails painted red—to annoy the pitcher, so he says. . . . American sports writers are confident that covering the news of the Berlin Olympics will be the most difficult assignment they've ever had because of the lack of telegraph wire facilities and cooperation of the German press.
