At present the Rose Bowl participant from the East is still a problem, but it seems that Alabama and Huey Long's Louisiana State rank around the top of the list, and should they finish the season with wins, the Ramber has an idea that one of the squads will have a better chance gainst the Western opponent, possibly Washington or California.

Value Of State Farm Products Paints Bright Agricultural Picture

The tremendous value of North Carolina farm products tends to paint the agricultural picture much brighter than it really is.

This statement was made by Dr. R. Y. Winters, director of the N. C. Agricultural Experiment Station, who has been keeping in close touch with the agricultural situation.

For example, he said, the value of North Carolina farm products sold and consumed on the farm in 1934 was placed at $353,682,000, or approximately twice as much as the State average for the nation.

Yet, he pointed out, when one considers the large number of people who must share the gross farm income, the allotment per person becomes ridiculously small.

Moreover, he said, the gross value does not take into account the cost of producing these commodities. Many farmers actually lose money when all costs are deducted from their gross income.

Back in 1926, when times were comparatively good, he added, the experiment station made a study of white cotton and tobacco farmers in Wake County.

Of the 294 land owners covered by the survey, 42.3 percent had a larger cash outlay for production than the gross income from their sales. Of the 300 tenants, 28.7 percent spent more than their farm produce brought on the market.

And these figures do not take into account depreciation of equipment or depreciation of land as a result of bad farm practices, Dr. Winters stat-

The experiment station, he continued, is constantly working on the development of better systems of farming and farm management that will yield farmers a larger net profit.
