Poultry Inventory Seen As Necessity

Inventories, highly important to the business man, get little attention from the average farmer.

In the poultry industry this glaring failure of bringing facts and figures up to date is especially true, says Roy S. Dearstyne, head of the State College poultry department.

Perhaps, he declares, the fact that practically all farms maintain some poultry is responsible for this condition, as in North Carolina the small flock predominates and is only one cog in the wheel of diversification.

Another cause, he says, may be due to difference and lack of understanding on the part of the owner as to the potential possibilities of poultry as a profit-making venture.

A great majority of the State's poultrymen keep no books on their costs and production, Dearstyne points out. Consequently, they know little or nothing of their business.

Quite often the grower deceives himself into believing that he can carry the detail of twelve months work in his head, the State College poultryman declares. However, such mental prodigies are few and far between.

"Perhaps they are not aware," Dearstyne says, "that the State College Extension Service has available for them a book-keeping service which is rendered without cost and takes the question mark out of the picture so far as profit and loss are concerned." Besides keeping records, the wise poultryman pays attention to other details closely associated with success, Dearstyne adds. Such factors include proper housing facilities, breeding practices, feeding, and disease prevention.

Two Bootleggers Get Off With $25 Fines

Two more defendants appeared in Recorder's Court Tuesday morning as the result of the drive by local officers against bootlegging. The two men were Lee and Russell Cox, colored, each of whom was found guilty of possession of bootleg liquor. The two were arrested in the home of Lee Cox on East Church Street, when officers seized a pint bottle full of bootleg liquor, as well as a gallon jug and fruit jar containing some of the liquor.

There was no criminal record against either of the two men and in view of this fact, Judge J. N. Pruden was lenient with his sentence, which in each case, was six months in jail, to be suspended upon the payment of $25 and costs, as well as showing good behavior for two years. On the latter condition Judge Pruden warned the prisoners, "If you get in any trouble within that time you will have to go to the roads. Stop messing with bootleg liquor. If you want whiskey, buy it from the ABC store." The trial of Joe Habit on the charge of attempting to bribe an officer in connection with his recent arrest on several liquor counts was postponed until next Tuesday due to the absence from the city of his attorney, John F. White.

REPUBLICAN Bertie County
 By Walter Hughes

I see they are trying to pass a law to give $10,000, when a man is lynched, to his people. When a man does a deed bad enough to be lynched, give the money to the man who lynched him.

I've heard this story told many a time by quail hunters: That he shot a hole through the bushes, and with the second barrel killed the quail through the same hole. But I saw it done the other day. Harry Zobel and myself were hunting on the Albe-marle Sound in a pine thicket. The dogs stood a quail, and when the quail came up it flew behind a bushy sapling. Mr. Zobel shot through the sapling, cut a limb off which dropped down. Mr. Zobel saw the quail through the hole and threw the other barrel at it. The quail bid farewell to the historic Albe-marle.

From the precinct of Raleigh last week came some fox hunters with 61 hounds. They hunted around Republican. They said their hounds would catch the fox. I told them that there were so many they would run their dogs to death, and they found it like I had told them. The dogs ran alright, but no catch. So they are coming back this week again.

A fellow went turkey hunting last week. He scattered some turkeys: He made himself a blind, and once in a while he would call. He heard nothing, so he dropped to sleep. A rustle woke him up and a big old gobbler was setting on the edge of the blind within a foot of him. The turkey made a break and kicked a little hole in the man's face which hurt him right bad.
