

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

PETER PREACHES TO GENTILES

International Sunday School Lesson for March 5, 1939

Golden Text: "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth: for I am God, and there is none else."—Isiah 45:22.

(Lesson Text: Acts 10:1-48)

Although the great Commission given to His disciples, just before he ascended unto Heaven had commanded them to preach the Gospel to "all nations," the disciples were slow to carry the gospel to the Gentiles. In our lesson last Sunday we learned that the Gospel had been preached in Samaria, but the Samaritans were regarded by the Jews as partly Jewish. Phillip had also preached to and won the Ethiopian eunuch but he was probably a proselyte who had embraced the full Jewish faith, else he would not have gone up to Jerusalem to worship.

Up until this time, there had been no recorded instance of preaching to the Gentiles. However, in the providence of God this was no longer to be. In the city of Caesarea, there lived a Roman centurion, a man of clean life and devout spirit. Realizing the emptiness of his pagan religion and hungry for something more soul-satisfying, this man, Cornelius, was praying to God for guidance. As he prayed, he received a message to send to Joppa for a man named Simon Peter, who would tell him what to do. Without question, Cornelius obeyed and sent three men to Joppa.

The next day, just as the messengers were nearing Joppa, Peter, who was staying at the house of one Simon, a tanner, while awaiting the noon-hour meal, went upon the housetop to pray. While praying, he, too, received a vision from the Lord. It seemed to him as though the heavens opened before him and a great vessel, like a sheet, let down before him. Within the vessel were many animals, creeping things and birds. Some of the animals were acceptable for food according to the Mosaic Law, while others in it were considered ceremonially "unclean" and thus could not be eaten by any Jew. Suddenly Peter heard a voice commanding him to kill and eat but Peter still true to his Jewish customs, declared, "Not so, Lord; for I have never eaten anything that is common or unclean." Then the voice answered, "What God hath cleansed, that call thou not common." The vision was repeated twice again, but Peter failed to understand its meaning.

However, just as the vision disappeared the messengers from Cornelius arrived. A voice declared to him, "Behold, three men seek thee; arise, and get thee down, and go with them, nothing doubting, for I have sent them." Peter arose immediately and went down. After they had explained their mission, Peter was convinced that it was the will of the Lord that he should go with them.

Upon arriving in Caesarea, he was greeted by Cornelius, who explained why he had sent for him. To Cornelius and the gathered friends and relatives, Peter began to preach, with such clarity and force that before he finished, the gathered crowd was thoroughly convinced and the Holy Spirit descended upon them.

Not alone does this lesson emphasize the Gospel of Jesus Christ removes all racial barriers, that his salvation is for all "nations," but it also calls attention to the fact that morally "good" men like Cornelius, are just as much in need of Jesus, the Savior, as anybody else. Our righteousness is not sufficient, for, as Peter declared to the Sanhedrin, "In none other is there salvation, for neither is there any other name under heaven, that is given among men, wherein we must be saved."
