

Home Economics Teachers Organize For Group Study

Exchange of Ideas Expected to Prove Very Beneficial

On Wednesday, August 30, the Home Economics teachers of Currituck, Pasquotank, Perquimans and Chowan counties met with Mrs. Helen B. Harrell in Hertford for the purpose of organizing for group study during the year. The following officers were elected: Mrs. Helen B. Harrell, chairman; Mrs. Evelyn B. Creekmore, secretary and treasurer; Miss Josephine Grant, reporter.

Plans for the year were discussed and the group chose as its theme Professional Growth and Development.

It was decided that the group meet once each month, discussing each time some phase of the theme. Each meeting will be held in a different school, thus giving each of the teachers an opportunity to see all of the home economics departments in this area. It is believed that these meetings will enable an exchange of ideas which will prove to be most beneficial to the group. The September meeting will be held at Central High School in Elizabeth City with Mrs. Floy G. Garner.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

ANIMAL PICTURES

Any barnyard is full of excellent human-interest picture chances... such as this close-up shot of a hen mothering her chicks.

WHEN someone mentions bird and animal pictures, most of us think of zoos, forests, or the African jungle. But—if you live on or near a farm—you have access to a number of fine animal subjects. And, take my word for it, domestic animals yield just as good pictures as wild ones.

Just for the fun of it, why not spend a day picturing farm animals? Go after expressive, human-interest shots, such as a hen mothering her brood, or pigs struggling for position at the trough. Shoot close-ups of a placid, cud-chewing cow, or a husky work-horse—just as if you were taking pictures of a person. Many animals have definite almost-human expressions at times... and they'll make fine pictures for your album. Distant shots, showing the animal small, will be disappointing unless it happens to be an incidental figure in a scenic. Most focusing cameras are adjusted to take subjects as near as six feet—many four feet, or even less. Many box cameras can be set for subjects as near as five. And, if you slip a portrait attachment on the camera lens, you can get even closer. Or, you can take a shot at normal distance, and have the best part of the negative enlarged to give a close-up effect.

It's not necessary to show all of a large animal, such as a cow or horse. Indeed, the head alone often makes a better picture. Choose the viewpoint which shows the head and expression most effectively—and fire away. Keep the background simple—changing your position when necessary to get distracting objects out of the camera's field of view.

Take your camera to the farm... keep your eyes open... shoot wisely and often. You'll find that any well-stocked barnyard yields splendid picture dividends.
