

FIRE LINE PLOWING PROGRAM STARTED IN CHOWAN UNDER WARDEN F. V. WHITE

Forest Service Crews at Work in Valhalla Section

Frank V. White, Chowan County Forest Warden, has announced the start of the fire line plowing program in Chowan County. At the present time the N. C. Forest Service crews, under the direction of Warden White, are now at work in the Valhalla section of the county.

The purpose of this work, points Warden White, is to break large wooded areas into small units so that Forest Service personnel are better able to combat forest fires. Lines can be plowed through the heaviest type of growth and the plow makes a furrow approximately eight feet in width. The equipment especially built for this work consists of a 9-ton tractor and heavy 4-disc plow. The plow is constructed with a 14-inch rolling Coulter blade followed by a middle-buster with two 28-inch discs on either side and to the rear of the middle-buster. This plow is able to completely go through heavy roots and small trees up to approximately 4 inches in diameter. The resulting furrow is clean and all soil and debris is thrown to either side.

"There are many advantages to having fire lines plowed through wooded areas," says Warden White. "Lines may be plowed along property boundaries making an almost never failing boundary marker. Some woodland owners use them as rough trails to get out logs and other forest products. They also are extremely popular with hunters as they afford an excellent means of moving through an almost impossible thicket so common to this section."

The N. C. Forest Service charges land owners $6.00 a mile for the work and the program has met with great interest from farmers and land owners throughout the State. Persons who are interested in having this work done on their property should contact Chowan Forest Warden F. V. White, Route 1, Edenton.

Sportsmen's Club Lauds Bonner For Fight In Congress

Opposed Bill Scuttling National Wildlife Refuge

Joseph P. Kennefick, secretary of the Lowell Sportsmen's Club of Lowell, Mass., writes The Chowan Herald that Representative Herbert C. Bonner did yeoman service for the sportsmen of the whole country in preventing the scuttling of the Parker River National Wildlife Refuge. During the closing hours of the last session of Congress, Mr. Bonner took the floor to oppose a bill which would have reduced the size of this refuge to impotence.

The Parker River Refuge, located in Essex County, Massachusetts, is not a local matter. It affects the waterfowl population along the entire Atlantic Flyway, constituting an important link in the chain of refuges from Canada to South Carolina.

Sportsmen of North Carolina have made an important contribution to this program in supporting Mattamussett and Pea Island, refuges. Massachusetts sportsmen have obtained benefits from the North Carolina refuge, and North Carolinians are entitled to their share of the benefits which will flow from the preservation of the Parker River Refuge.

"This refuge has become a political football," says Mr. Kennefick. "A small group of short-sighted, selfish people are obsessed with a desire to destroy this important project. In opposing this group, Congressman Bonner has demonstrated great courage and far-sightedness. His efforts are deeply appreciated by the rank and file of Massachusetts hunters and many other citizens of this state who support the wildlife restoration program. We feel that in doing so he has also done a service to his own
