

Openings Available For Skilled Workers At Langley Field

Mrs. Corie B. White In Position to Furnish Information

Notice that a number of job openings for qualified engineering and skilled workers offering attractive salaries and working conditions are now available at the huge research laboratory of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, Langley

Field, Virginia, has been received by the Edenton office of the North Carolina State Employment Service.

Mrs. Corie B. White, manager of the local office, declared that shortages of these specialized workers must be met as soon as possible to avoid serious delays in the government's aeronautical research program, vital to national defense and to America's leadership in commercial aviation. She said that the search for the necessary workers is being extended to many parts of the country.

This important research facility, operated by NACA, is seeking building architects; electrical, mechanical and aeronautical engineers; statistical technicians, physicists and draftsmen—architectural, mechanical and structural, the ES office manager said. Salaries for these positions range from $2,168 to $4,149 annually.

Openings also are available for skilled Instrument Makers and Radio Mechanics at yearly salaries ranging from $1,705 to $3,057. Mrs. White said that full details on each position will be made available to interested persons. The Langley Field laboratory, she pointed out, has been operated by the government for 30 years and its accomplishments are many. Most of the preliminary design work on the D-558, the transoceanic Douglas Sky-streak which held the world air speed record of 650.6 miles per hour, was conducted there.

Qualified persons who are interested in these positions should apply for further information at the local office, 204 Citizen Bank Building. Applications can be accepted immediately.
