

Employment Offices In State Get Jobs For 119,326 During 1947

Drop In Activities Reflects More Stable Employment Conditions

Jobs were found in 1947 for 119,326 workers in local non-agricultural employment, 40,051 of them veterans, 40,247 of them women and 6,275 of them physically handicapped, through local employment offices in the State, it is revealed in a report made to Chairman Henry E. Kendall of the Employment Security Commission by Director Ernest C. McCracken of its North Carolina State Employment Service Division.

Figures on activities of the local employment offices show a slight drop in most respects, but this is taken as an index to improvement in labor conditions in the State, reflecting a more stable employment condition. Most of the drop from 1946 in local office activities comes from relatively smaller numbers of veterans using the facilities, indicating that more veterans had steady jobs in 1947 than during the previous year.

At the end of 1947, local employment offices had 6,904 unfilled orders from employers for workers, the smallest number carried over in any year. This is only four per cent of the total of 175,782 jobs listed for workers in 1947. Local office personnel made 223,282 referrals to these jobs, resulting in 119,326 placements, or 53 per cent of the referrals.

Also at the end of the year, 25,906 active applications for jobs were on file in local employment offices, 12 per cent less than at the end of 1946.

About 33 per cent of the non-agricultural placements made in 1947 were in manufacturing, primarily in tobacco, textile, food, lumber, furniture and apparel industries. In the non-manufacturing groups, most of the placements were in construction, trade, private household service and business services, the report showed.

HEALTH HINTS

BY DR. GEORGE T. CRAWFORD, CHIROPRACTIC PHYSICIAN

ABOUT CROUP

THIS disease usually affects children and occurs in spasmodic attacks at night. The child awakens suddenly with a sense of suffocation and a croupy cough. Breathing is intensely difficult, and the child's face becomes bluish in color. The condition is caused by contraction of the muscles of the larynx. The attacks usually last about an hour but several attacks may occur in succession, and usually recur for three or more nights. Sometimes convulsions accompany the attacks.

The treatment of croup in children by Chiropractic adjustments has always been most gratifying. There are few complaints that yield so readily to adjustments as does croup. A single adjustment is usually all that is necessary to bring the attack to an abrupt end, and the attacks seldom recur. This is the experience of Chiropractors all over the country.

Attacks of croup are caused by contractions of muscles which close the larynx and prevent the passage of air. These contractions are caused by improper nerve supply to the muscles involved and this in turn is caused by pressure on the nerves at the point where they leave the spinal column.

As soon as the adjustment is given and the pressure on the nerve is released, the nerve force passes to the muscles of the larynx, the contraction ceases and breathing again becomes normal. There is no other form of treatment which gives such immediate relief in croup as Chiropractic. We have not done our duty to our children until they have had the best and quickest relief when they fall ill.
