Drive Starts In Chowan To Raise Funds With Which To Help Fight Against Cancer

Entire Month of April Designated as Cancer Month

QUOTA IS $800

Leaders Hopeful Quota Will Be Far Over Subscribed

Today (Thursday) a drive will be started to raise funds with which to combat cancer. Mrs. Ralph Parrish, commander for Chowan County, has been very busy arranging for the drive and hopes the quota of $800 will be far oversubscribed. Miss Rebecca Colwell is county chairman and Mrs. Nathan Dail treasurer.

In commenting upon the scope of the cancer program, Mrs. Parrish says an allocation of more than $150,000 by the North Carolina Division of the American Society was made for specific activities designed to reduce cancer's death toll in the State.

The control activities range from local information centers and treatment clinics, through a series of post-graduate medical courses for practicing physicians, to research projects and a year 'round, state-wide public education program.

Biggest item in the $150,000 allocation is $50,381.32 assigned to individual counties for special control projects recommended by county medical committees and approved by state and national officials.

Nearly $45,000 was assigned to the national research program, one of the greatest in medical history, to help find the causes and cure of all cancer.

The North Carolina Division is investing nearly $24,000 in its state-wide educational program, which medical experts declare is vital to the control of cancer today, and an additional $26,000 to the national educational program. The latter includes medical as well as lay education.

Care of indigent cancer patients, who are unable to afford the cost themselves, is provided for by a state division fund of $8,000 over and above other funds included in the projects in certain counties for indigent care.

Canvassers will solicit funds for the Chowan drive and all are urged to contribute liberally in the fight against the nation's No. 2 killer.

The drive is again sponsored by the Junior Woman's Club.

Visitor Impressed With Edenton Visit

C. Mickle of Taylorsville Writes Pleasing Letter to Herald

As the result of seeing a postcard depicting the Edenton Tea Pot, C. Mickle of Taylorsville, N. C., recently made a trip to Edenton, and the effect of his visit is reflected in a letter sent to The Herald this week.

Mr. Mickle's letter follows:

Lured by a postcard showing a picture of the tea pot and the prospect of seeing the coast, I spent the holidays in your city and found it very charming.

The people of Edenton were so helpful in directing me to places of interest, Mr. and Mrs. Saunders in the hotel and the two clerks and in lending me pamphlets, books, etc.; the librarian, and a young fellow I met in the churchyard, not one of the celebrated dead, but one very much alive and deeply interested in the history, although not a native. He told me of a most attractive house not far from the church. I just regret not having had more time for discussing with him and bringing to life those people who lived so long ago.

One of the most attractive places to me was the "gate house," lodge or what you may call it at the approach to Hayes house. I fell in love with its first concert.
