Named to Head March of Dimes

Ralph McDonald

Ralph McDonald, prominent Winston-Salem educator and civic leader, has been appointed North Carolina State Chairman of the 1949 March of Dimes, Basil O'Connor, president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, announced today. It is Mr. McDonald's seventh consecutive year as head of the fund raising campaign in North Carolina.

The March of Dimes, conducted nationally each January, is the sole support of the National Foundation and its 2,800 local county chapters. Funds contributed to the annual drive pay costs of medical care and treatment for polio victims and finance the scientific research and professional education programs sponsored by the National Foundation. The 1949 appeal will be held January 14-31.

Mr. McDonald, executive secretary of the Department of Higher Education of the National Education Association, Washington, D. C., was previously associate director of the extension division of the University of North Carolina. He has organized and directed several state-wide educational movements including the Liberal Arts College Movement, the North Carolina Public Forums and the Commission for the Defense of Democracy through Education. Mr. McDonald was formerly a member of the North Carolina State Legislature.

Mr. O'Connor, in announcing Mr. McDonald's acceptance of the March of Dimes chairmanship, revealed that when complete incidence figures for this year are tabulated the toll of infantile paralysis in the United States from 1943 through 1948 may well exceed 100,000 cases. "While the final answer to the mystery of poliomyelitis—the discovery of a cure and a preventive for the disease—lies in the research laboratory," Mr. O'Connor said, "the generous support of the American people is now more vital than ever before if victims of polio, children and adults alike, are to receive the care they must have to achieve maximum recovery."

SPORTS AFIELD

By Ted Kesting

The beginner cannot be expected to know all the fundamentals of small-boat operation, but even a novice must recognize that some preparation is required before starting a trip, states Willard Crandall, boating authority.

Not only must proper tools and equipment be aboard, but weather must be considered. By weather we mean, principally, wind. Swamping or upsetting from big waves is the greatest hazard of small boating. There are no hard and fast rules as to what size waves a novice can tackle, but if water sloshes in, or even threatens to, the safety margin has long been passed.

The newcomer to boating should stick to sheltered waters until thoroughly familiar with his craft. One of his toughest jobs is to learn to avoid collisions with objects underwater. Here are a few elementary rules:

Don't start the outboard unless headed straight out toward clear water, and with at least six inches of water under the lowest part of the motor. Never start an outboard where it is too congested and unnecessarily shallow.

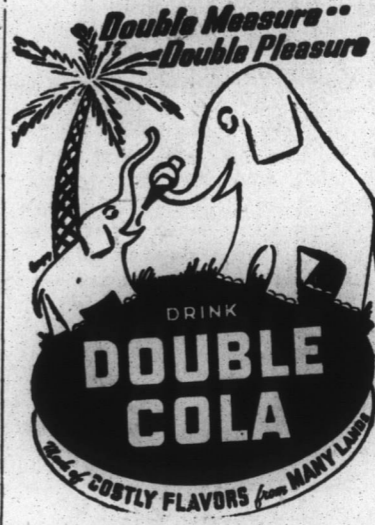

When underway, avoid weedbeds; don't go too close to shore, and slow down or stop at once if logs or rocks are present, or if shallow bottom is seen passing under the boat. Stay well clear of jutting points of land. Reduce speed if any man-made obstructions are seen above water. Keep speed down off rocky shores. Treat all floating objects with respect and stick to marked channels in unfamiliar waters.

The beginner must learn never to underestimate the power of waves, or to take chances with them. Particularly must he guard against swells of other boats and he must not carelessly swamp a smaller boat with his own wake. Always head into dangerous waves. This is an invariable rule of boating.

Making the landing, the final step in boat operation, is something that can be learned only by experience. It is better for a beginner to err on the side of a too-slow landing until he has learned the best speed, and just how to handle the boat at that speed.

Republics end through luxury; monarchies through poverty.
