

Members Of Skeet Club Given Awards

Interesting Meeting at Ernest Lee's Thursday Night

Members of the Chowan County Wildlife Club held a very interesting meeting at Ernest Lee's place Thursday night, at which time awards were made to the high scorers in the various classes of skeet shooting. President Rodney Byrum presided and a chicken dinner was served those who attended.

J. D. Elliott won the highest honor, the Selby Harney award, for his outstanding skill in blasting the clay birds. Second class winner was L. S. Byrum; third, J. G. Perry and fourth, R. E. Sawyer.

The awards were donated by Peter Carlton.

A fifth award was won by Polk Williams, 16-year-old Sea Scout and son of Dr. and Mrs. L. P. Williams, now enrolled at McCallie Military Academy at Chattanooga, Tenn.

For outstanding service, members of the Wildlife Club presented a beautiful trophy to Percy Perry. Other prizes were given to various members which caused a great amount of amusement in some cases for the reasons given.

Colonial - Suffolk Series Called Off

Small Crowds Turn Out For First Two Post-Season Games

After two games were played in the proposed five-game post season series between the Edenton Colonials and the Suffolk Goobers of the Virginia League, it was discovered that baseball in Edenton had run its course and the series was called off Wednesday night of last week after comparatively small crowds turned out for the first two games played in Edenton.

Suffolk defeated the Colonials in both games, taking the first game with little trouble by a score of 8-0. On Wednesday night the Colonials played a somewhat improved game, but even then lost to the Suffolk aggregation 5-2.

The Colonials looked nothing like the team which was on the field while winning the Albemarle League pennant and subsequently the league championship, and due to the apparent lack of interest on the part of fans, both teams agreed to call off the remaining games.

Proper Curing Advised For Sweet Potatoes

Farmers who cure their sweet potatoes carefully and store them at the proper temperature and humidity are finding their losses from rot to be reduced appreciably, says H. M. Covington, Extension Horticulture specialist at State College.

Sweet potatoes have for years been "cured" before storage—kept for about 10 days immediately after harvest at a temperature of 85 degrees and a relative humidity of about 85 per cent. The explanation for the success of this process is that when the skin of a sweet potato tuber is broken in the harvesting process, the tuber forms a layer of corky cells which heals the wound. This healing takes place most rapidly in fairly high temperature and moisture conditions.

Even with the greatest possible care in handling, there are at least two small wounds on almost every sweet potato, where the ends are broken in harvesting. Until completely healed by the formation of new cells, these breaks are entrances for disease-producing organisms. U. S. Department of Agriculture specialists working in cooperation with the Southeastern States have found that wound-cork layers formed beneath the dried and hardened wound surface greatly retard infection and to a large degree actually prevent it. At a temperature of 85 degrees and a relative humidity of 85 per cent this healing process begins by the third day and proceeds rapidly.
