

Farmers In Bear Swamp Area Using New Drain Ditches

Drainage Outlets Proving Very Beneficial to Landowners

Farmers of the Bear Swamp section of Chowan County have recently begun to utilize the large drainage ditches which were dug through this area several years ago by the Soil Conservation Service in an expanded way. Heretofore, it was only those landowners having land close in to these large drainage outlets who really benefited to any great extent. For the landowners of the tracts lying back and away drainage benefits have been small, in some cases very small. The lead ditches needed to connect these back or distantly located tracts to the outlet system and to give improved drainage were missing. The low yields of crops over the last few years as a result of inadequate drainage have served to demonstrate fully the necessity of constructing the missing links—the badly needed lead ditches. It is with the construction of these missing link ditches that several Bear Swamp farmers are now concerning themselves. B. P. Monds, E. B. Boyce and J. P. McNider are leading off in this work by constructing such a lead ditch for draining 150 acres of their crop land. Their ditch, which is now almost complete, averages about 15 feet in top width, 3 feet in bottom width and is about 5 feet deep. The ditch length is 1,800 yards. In the planning, surveying, designing and construction of their ditch these farmers were assisted by R. C. Jordan, soil conservationist of Chowan County, and R. M. Dailey, drainage engineer of Northeastern North Carolina. Both of these men are representatives of the Soil Conservation Service which assists farmers of the Albemarle Soil Conservation District in the conservation of water and soil.

Other farmers of the Bear Swamp area are in the process of planning and constructing similar lead or outlet ditches. According to Mr. Jordan, a survey has just been completed of a ditch for improving the drainage of lands owned by Wilbur Privott, J. Elton Jordan, B. P. Monds and R. H. Hollowell. Mrs. E. B. White and her son, E. B. White, are planning drainage relief measures for their Bear Swamp tracts.

B. P. Monds states that several farmers have observed the construction of the ditch that he and Messrs. Boyce and McNider are digging and have praised them highly for their venture. A dragline ditching machine is being used for the excavation of this ditch.

Dr. R. B. House Speaker At School Sunday Night

(Continued From Page One) campus by the Daily Tar Heel after the consolidation which formed the Greater University he was the outstanding choice of the undergraduates to head the University at Chapel Hill. Chancellor House has been prominent for many years in the work of the Methodist Church, and has spoken a number of times before the North Carolina Conference of the Methodist Church. At his home church in Chapel Hill he serves on the Board of Stewards, and since going to the University has taught the men's class, a large class containing most of the business men of the community.

The address of Dr. House is the first in a series being presented by the Methodist Church of Edenton each Sunday evening during the month of October on the theme: "The Church and the Contemporary Crisis".

Mister!

I been peddling flour since I was knee high to a grasshopper. And I never seen the buyer yet who wouldn't swap 'advertising for a nickel a barrel. But if you think a nickel's worth more than the flavor you get in Silver Mist biscuits, one of us is crazy. Why don't you let Pa say which one? Sure, he's a grouchy old cuss, but he likes biscuits. Silver Mist biscuits, that is. Because Silver Mist Flour's got what it takes to make biscuits taste good. Flavor. Good-tasting flavor. You can't tell the difference by looking at Silver Mist. Looks ordinary, like most flours, except the sorry ones. Silver Mist just tastes better, when you bake biscuits or pie or cake. Bread and rolls, too, for that matter. Nothing fancy, just good flour. Dog-gone good flour, folks tell me. But maybe that's because they believe what I tell them.

Sil
That's what my Silver, Mister!

Local Cotton Used in Garments Overseas

ATLANTA—A sample of the children's garments being made overseas from Southern cotton is displayed here by Marilyn Strattner (left) and Margery Williams. This sweater was made in Germany from raw cotton distributed in needy areas through the church channels of the Christian Rural Overseas program (CROP). By shipping raw cotton, CROP provides employment as well as relief.

CROP is now conducting campaigns throughout the South for individual state overseas relief trains. Cotton, as well as rice, peanuts, soy beans, corn, syrup, and other farm commodities will be shipped. Director of the Southern campaigns is Thomas F. Byrd, with offices here. Dr. Louie Newton, prominent Baptist churchman, is head of the Southern Advisory committee for CROP.

Competent speakers of wide reputation are being brought in to discuss particular phases of the general theme. The pastor of the church, the Rev. W. L. Freeman, in announcing the series said, "There is a peculiar urgency about the present situation which demands an informed church membership since our problem is basically spiritual. The members of the church are at the same time members of the world community, and must, as both churchmen and citizens, take seriously the problem of our time."

"Some of our best minds are wondering what is the future for Western civilization. The editors of Time speak of our being on 'final ground'. The atomic scientists are concerned over the lethargy of the American public. General Douglas MacArthur warns us that 'Armageddon will be at our door'. Even the recent vice-presidential address of the American Academy of the Advancement of Science closed with an earnest invocation of Diety. If the Christian principles for which the Church has historically stood are valid they must be pertinent to our present situation. In the light of the developments in the international relations during the last few days it is imperative that we endeavor to discover the nature of our problem and the possible solution. We expect Dean House and the other speakers in this series to give us some indication as to what we can do about the problem."

Further speakers on successive Sunday evenings in October will be Dr. Robert Lee Humber of Greenville, Dr. Ellen Winston of Raleigh, Dr. Sylvester Green of Durham and Dr. Mark Depp of Winston Salem.

CARD OF THANKS
