

Bankers Emphasize Conservation Of Soil

Organization Continues Fight Against Farm Land Price Inflation

Promotion of soil conservation, cooperation with farm youth and other high school pupils in their educational program, and continuation of the fight against farm-land price inflation are receiving special emphasis in the North Carolina Bankers Association program for 1949, according to John P. McNair, Jr., of Laurinburg, president of the association.

Calling special attention to the agricultural speaking contest for high school students, which the Bankers Association is sponsoring this year for the fourth time, Mr. McNair said: "Last year more than 4,000 contestants from 303 schools entered the contest, and total awards were in excess of $6,000. So we shall not be surprised to have more than 5,000 contestants with total awards near the $10,000 mark for the 1949 contest."

"It is our desire," Mr. McNair continued, "to see this contest enlarged each year. We firmly believe that the people of North Carolina will show financial growth or decline in relationship to their care of the soil."

The cooperation of school authorities in conducting the contest has been excellent, the Laurinburg banker asserted. "We consider the speaking contest one of the most important activities of the Bankers Association agricultural committee, for through it both young and old learn more about the importance of proper soil conservation methods. As a part of this activity, the committee also suggests support of the forestry program as an important phase of soil conservation."

The general subject for the contest is "Proper Land Use and Treatment—Its Effect Upon the Economy of North Carolina." Students and teachers may obtain full information from any local agricultural workers or by writing to J. Frank Doggett, soil conservationist for the State College Extension Service, Raleigh.

An average yield of 250 bushels per acre was reported by the 42 growers. Billie Simmons of Piney Grove community reported the highest yield, which was 410 bushels per acre.

Willie B. Williams of Daniel Chapel community stored the largest number of bushels, a total of 625. Other farmers conducting storage and curing demonstrations were Oso Baker of Draper, Henry Alston of Eastman, B. D. Hardy of Wayman, Johnnie Hawkins of Print, Lewis Thomas of Tillery Chapel, Russell Purnell of Diololia, Walter Knight of Dawson, J. M. Scott and A. T. Taylor of Daniel Chapel.
