Semi-Final Series In Albemarle League Will Start Saturday

Edenton Officials Find It Necessary to Raise Price to 75 Cents

Officials of the Albemarle League have decided to extend the regular season one day due to so many postponed games, so that the last regular season games are scheduled to be played Friday night.

The semi-final play-offs are scheduled to begin Saturday night, when the Edenton Colonials will play the fourth position team on Hicks Field at 8:30 o'clock.

Colonial officials announced that the admission price for the series games will be 75 cents instead of 50 cents. This action was deemed necessary in order to meet a deficit which has been caused by so many rained-out games and poor attendance due to threatening weather.

Colonial officials anticipate some complaint due to the boost, but they call attention to the fact that his season the price for regular games was dropped from 60 to 50 cents, so that they are of the opinion that not too much of a howl should be raised due to a slight increase in order to pay out on a project which has benefited the entire community. The officials state that baseball is not a money-making proposition and that they would rather decrease than increase the admission price. However, if enough fans forego the slight boost, it is hoped all indebtedness can be liquidated, in which case baseball will be assured for next season.
