Experiment Station Releases Bulletin

A new bulletin on "Opportunities for Adjustment in Farming Systems, Southern Piedmont Area, North Carolina" has just been issued by the North Carolina Agricultural Experiment Station and copies are available on request.

The publication may provide some help for farmers looking for ways to improve the organization and efficiency of their farms. W. W. McPherson, agricultural economist at State College and senior author of the bulletin, says the study enables a farmer to preview his chances with a new enterprise before he begins the change-over.

The bulletin applies particularly to the counties of Polk, Rutherford, Cleveland, Gaston, Lincoln, Mecklenburg, Union, Anson, Stanly, Cabarrus, Rowan, Iredell, and Catawba.

There are two main parts to the publication. The first is a detailed description of agricultural conditions in the Southern Piedmont area—soil, climate, rainfall, size of farms, present cropping system, and people.

The second part answers some of the questions regarding adjustments in the farming pattern. It also compares the costs and returns of present practices with those of improved practices.

Copies of the bulletin, designated as Experiment Station Technical Bulletin No. 87, may be obtained by writing the Agricultural Editor, State College Station, Raleigh.

There is practically no limit to the progress possible in Edenton if the so-called leaders will get together and give themselves to the common welfare, without expecting any unearned rewards.
