

CAMPER'S CABIN AT CAMP DON-LEE

Completion of construction of Camp Don-Lee for the young people of Eastern North Carolina is the Christmas project of the Methodists of the North Carolina Conference. Over 750 churches in the Conference will receive a Christmas offering for the purpose of building the dining room and kitchen unit and installing the utilities at the camp. According to the Rev. J. G. Phillips, of Durham, secretary of Camp Don-Lee, Incorporated, a good response to this Christmas project will enable the camp trustees to begin camping activities next June. Two hundred campers, including staff members, will attend the camp sessions each week during the entire summer. Fully equipped cabins and bath houses have already been completed. This youth camp is located in Pamlico County on the Neuse River, near Arapahoe, N. C.

Veterans Unaware Of Free Treatment

J. L. Wiggins Ready to Aid Vets to Secure Applications

Many North Carolina veterans being treated regularly by their own physicians for service-connected ailments at their own expense are unaware that they are entitled to such treatments at government expense.

This benefit applies to only those veterans who have filed a claim and have been granted service-connection for a disability even though they did not receive a compensable rating for compensation.

A large number of veterans have been granted a service-connected "zero" rating making them ineligible to receive compensation but entitling them to out-patient treatment at government expense.

Veterans who have no compensable rating but have established service-connection and who desire treatment at other than their own expense are requested to contact the North Carolina Veterans Commission, 206 Kramer Building, Elizabeth City, or Jasper L. Wiggins, Chowan County Service Officer, Edenton for assistance in making application for treatment.

Keep Christmas Tree Standing In Water

Practical Way to Help In Reducing Holiday Fire Hazard

"Keep that Christmas tree standing in water!" is the advice which Miss Ruth Current, State home demonstration agent for the State College Extension Service, gave to North Carolina farm families this week.

This, she explained, is the most practical, satisfactory, and convenient method for reducing the Christmas tree fire hazard and preventing the needles from dis-coloring and falling.

Miss Current says the following procedure is recommended by the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Forest Products Laboratory at Madison, Wis., for the water treatment:

1. Obtain a tree that has been cut as recently as possible.
2. Cut off the end of the trunk diagonally at least on inch above the original cut end. Stand the tree at once in a container of water and keep the water level above the cut surface during the entire time that the tree is in the house. If the tree is not to be set for several days, it should be kept standing in water meanwhile in a cool place.

If started in time, this treatment will prevent the needles from drying out and becoming flammable, and will keep them fresh and green. It will also retard the fall of needles of such species as spruce, which loses needles very easily, in contrast to balsam fir, which retains its needles even after the branches have become dry and the needles brittle. Freshly cut spruce or balsam fir trees standing in water cannot be set on fire by candle or match fires, but of course, will not withstand a large source of heat.

As the Forest Service points out, householders should take all possible precautions against fire around the Christmas tree, including the elimination of defective electrical connections, and avoidance of the accumulation of combustible decorations on or beneath the tree. Also, the tree should be placed so that its accidental burning would not ignite curtains or other combustible furnishings, nor trap the occupants of a room or building.

Talk to five people about your ailment and you will get five remedies but you will still have the ailment.

Money, for some reason, seems to inject ice into the blood stream of generous men.
