Clarence Leary presented the awards to the winners.

Thirty-eight boys competed in the contest with yields ranging from 89.4 bushels per acre to 18.2.

Dr. Wallace S. Griffin opened the program with a brief, but highly interesting talk on the subject of "Lions International."

"Lions International has purchased a tract of land comprising several thousand acres near Chicago," said Dr. Griffin. "This will be known as Lions International City. It will contain not only a home for aged Lions from all over the world, but will have a hospital and also office buildings for the officers of the international organization. It will be a self-contained city within itself."

Dr. Griffin stated further that every Lions Club in the world is being requested the equivalent of $1.00 per member to finance the building of this vast project. The local club voted to make this donation.

Hoover Commission Promised Support

field of work," he said.

The Hoover Commission was organized back in 1947. It included over 300 outstanding citizens chosen to study the federal government for possible improvement in efficiency of services and economics to the taxpayer.

The Commission, named the Hoover Commission because of its chairman, the former President, made it report last June after sending the numerous "task forces" it included into all branches for study.

In recent weeks a number of economy-minded citizens have rallied to the support of the program. The Edenton Junior Chamber of Commerce has been particularly active in mustering popular support to legislation following the recommendations.

A meeting of the Chairmen of the Seventh District was held in Tarboro Wednesday night which was attended by Chairman Frank Holmes and a group of Edenton Jaycees.
