

This Atomic World

By JIMMIE CHURCH

Practically everything in the field of the atom has been experimented and tested in order to bring about a state of peace to hover over the earth. The scientific world has gone so far as to talk and write about a bomb that is capable of destroying all forms of life. Destruction is not an element that will ever promote a reign of peace. Yet destructive equipment has been the star to which the wagon of mankind has been hitched for the past decade.

Every nation has strived to pile up more means of destruction than the other. Man has destroyed man! More money and time has been spent for scientific experiments in the destruction of human life than for experiments in the field of salvation of life. Every nation has struggled for power. Man has studied and figured and planned ways and means to defeat his neighbor. He has not bothered to think of helping ways. Everybody is greedy and plunging forward to grasp, not only the wealth of the other, but power. The main objective—atomic power.

Would not this world, which God has created for man, be more serene; and would not life be more pleasant for all concerned; should atomic power be forgotten for just one twenty-four hour day, and all nations and all people, no matter what nationality, religion, color, or creed, join forces and create just one enormous and vigorous explosion of atomic prayer to Almighty God?

The atomic world today is the world of tomorrow for which the pride of our nation's youth fought yesterday. Are the crosses of Flanders, the lone graves of the deserts, the moss covered bodies of the jungles and the dead in the oceans symbols of peace or symbols of atomic power?

Man cannot be at peace with himself without first finding peace with God. And man cannot be at peace with God so long as he is trying to destroy the works of God. God created man and earth and reserved the right to destroy man and earth at His will. The world was not for mortal man to rule, and no matter how big the bomb or how powerful the empire, only the undying mercy of God will give life and only the wrath of God will destroy the things that He has made.

Atomic power could aggravate the wrath of God; but atomic prayer might hold His mercy.
