

WEEKLY LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY

Eleven and a half weeks in Raleigh have been enough to make legislators think seriously of winding up the session; some have made the point on the floor. The wave of local bills introduced this week probably means the members want to be sure their local bills are not lost in the last-minute scramble following approval of the revenue and appropriations bills, measures that may reach the floor shortly. Despite these developments, the presiding officers have not yet appointed calendar committees, the usual signal of anticipated adjournment.

Appropriations and Taxation
Revenue Department information released by the Governor on Friday indicates that tax collections in the current fiscal year will exceed by some $10 million the December estimates used by the Advisory Budget Commission in projecting collections available for spending in the next biennium. With an anticipated General Fund surplus of $20 million at the end of the current biennium, and assuming the current estimate of a $10 million collection excess holds good for the next 2 years, the General Assembly may have found about $40 million to apply against the requests for some $80 million more than the Advisory Budget Commission originally recommended. Even though the joint finance committee has approved no material changes in the state's tax structure, this prophecy of more money makes it likely that the appropriations subcommittee's recommendations to be turned over to the full committee on Tuesday will be substantially in excess of the figures with which they started work.

Administration of Justice
The Judicial Council, the permanent agency studying improvement of the administration of justice, submitted 25 bills to this General Assembly; to date 9 have passed, 9 have been killed, and 7 remain in committee. Proposals on judicial organization, such as those transferring (pursuant to the recent constitutional amendment) from the governor to the chief justice the duty of assigning superior court judges, have met general approval indeed the Assembly may go farther by setting up 3 court divisions and providing more regular judges for the more populous districts, a step the Council opposes until the chief justice has had a chance to ease dockets through more careful assignment. On the other hand, legislators are much more conservative in their approach to procedural changes. They have disapproved 2 bills to permit juries to take exhibits and written instructions into the jury room, one which would bar bystanders in all cases involving sex crimes, and 5 more which would have simplified civil and criminal procedure. Still to be approved is the more essential of 2 measures offered to make sure that condemned prisoners will not be executed while an appeal is in process. Bills left in committee include HB 77, opening all court records to public inspection except those dealing with adoption and juvenile court proceedings, HB 82, permitting the governor's appointee to a judicial vacancy to remain in office until the next general election held over 30 days after the vacancy occurs, and HB 87, permitting condemned criminals to assert an alleged denial of constitutional rights in the courts.

Race Track Betting
Opponents of pari-mutuel betting at dog tracks in Carteret and Currituck counties made it plain at a public hearing on Tuesday that they do not consider race track gambling a matter for local legislation. A large delegation appearing to support bills outlawing pari-mutuel betting in this state told the House propositions and grievances committee that nation-wide syndicates control North Carolina tracks and receive most of the profits. Paralleling the argument for a state-wide liquor referendum, race track opponents contended there should be a consistent state policy on gambling. Next Tuesday the same committee will hear proponents of pari-mutuel betting.

Small Loans and Insurance
Working from information furnished the legislature by the Banking Commissioner, Senators Stoney and Lar-kins have proposed that a commission be established to study the need for accident and health insurance rate regulation with special emphasis on policies purchased in conjunction with small loans. As an alternative, Senator Stoney introduced a bill which would immediately give the Commissioner of Insurance authority to regulate accident and health policy rates. Bankers and insurance men attending a hearing on Thursday were confronted with statements that excessive rates are being charged on policies sold to secure loans and heard the Banking Commissioner assert that a 2-year delay in dealing with the matter would cost borrowers $5 million. A subcommittee has been assigned the task of recommending a solution.

Roads and Automobiles
Another motor vehicle inspection bill was introduced in the House on Friday just as the Senate received unfavorable reports on 2 similar proposals. The new bill's fate seemed predetermined. The Senate has passed the turnpike bill and has approved a bill to prohibit persons under 15 from operating farm machinery on (Continued on Page Nine)
