Garden Time

By ROBERT SCHMIDT

It seems out of place to talk about irrigation when we are having plenty of rain. It reminds me of the story of the man who wouldn't fix the roof of his house in fair weather because it wasn't necessary, and when it rained he wasn't able to fix it. Rain or not, it is timely to discuss irrigation and prepare for it against the time when we will need it.

Many vegetables attain high quality when they make rapid growth and this is made possible by plenty of moisture. Good examples are the greens crops and other leafy crops. Two or three weeks of dry weather can check the growth of some vegetables so they will never recover and the result will be a tough, stringy and fibrous product. It has been my experience that you cannot depend on natural rainfall if you expect to grow high quality vegetables.

You should have an inch of rainfall each week or 10 days. When the rain fails you the same amount of water should be applied from other sources—a pond, well, stream, or city water supply. If the garden area is flat, surface or furrow irrigation may be used. If not, one of the overhead sprinkler systems may be used. The most popular and effective type is the one having a short standpipe with a rotating nozzle at the top. The water is usually brought to it by pipe or rubber hose.

Expensive you say? Perhaps, if you think in terms of one year, but you will use the equipment over a number of years, and think of the vegetables and berries you will save by its use! A friend who has been selling irrigation systems for commercial operations in this State said that last year he sold more equipment for irrigating pastures than for any other purpose. If it is not too expensive for pastures, it certainly is not too expensive for the vegetable garden which should furnish your table with the best to be had.

CHIEF OF POLICE GEORGE DAIL SAYS

Glaring headlights, a blinded driver—these words appear all too often on Edenton Police accident records.

Let's erase them with a little common courtesy in traffic. Always dim your headlights, both when meeting and when overtaking other cars. A driver, blinded by oncoming headlights, might just as well be driving in complete darkness as far as his ability to see and avoid danger is concerned. And never, never try to "get back" at a "bright-eyed" driver by trying to overpower him with your own brights. Discourtesy plus discourtesy can easily equal a head-on crash.

Misuse of Headlights Makes Danger Invisible—Accidents Unavoidable! Traffic lane and center line markings have been put on streets and highways for your protection. The officers of Edenton Police Department are pledged to enforce the laws these pavement markings represent. Here's how to avoid an embarrassing encounter with a traffic officer: Observe pavement markings to the letter—especially center line markings that indicate no passing zones and limited visibility areas. Avoid weaving from lane to lane and cutting back into line too quickly after passing.

Overstep the Warnings of Pavement Markings and You Put One Foot In Your Own Grave.
