

Group Of Farmers Consider Research At E. City Meeting

Referendum November 3 to Vote For or Against Plan

A small group of leading farmers, and some Extension Agents and some agricultural workers met at Elizabeth City on Friday afternoon to learn more about the proposed means for supporting greater agricultural research. It is through research that better varieties, disease resistant varieties, and all the new things in agriculture are developed. Good research workers are in very high demand. North Carolina wants the best but it costs money in addition to regular appropriations.

One serious problem facing peanut growers at the present time is the damage and loss caused by Southern Stem or Root Rot. Granville Will and Black Shank in tobacco became alarming problems but through research resistant varieties were developed. It is realized that these resistant varieties are not near perfect but are far better than fields dying from these diseases causing growers to go out of business. It will be through research that a Southern Stem Rot resistant variety of peanuts will be found although it may take many years.

The last General Assembly made it possible for the farm people of North Carolina to cooperate in supporting agricultural research financially if they want to. By adding five cents to the price of each ton of seed and fertilizer used farm people can contribute $100,000 to $150,000 annually to the research program. This will amount to an average of about forty cents per farm, each farm contributing in proportion to the tons of seed and fertilizer used. Every farmer will participate and have some part. On November 3, a referendum will be held giving farm people in North Carolina an opportunity to vote for or against this plan.

LITTLE KOREAN PREFERS THE ARMY—The plight of hundreds of orphans and homeless children is of the heart-rending tragedies attending the Communist invasion of Korea. American Soldiers in all branches of the Armed Forces have provided food and shelter for these pitiable waifs.

This photograph, made in Korea early in June, furnishes the wordless story of a little child abandoned in a village last winter. She was found by 1st Lt. William Doernbach, of Egg Harbor, N. J., and later turned over to an orphanage. Recently she ran away from the asylum and rejoined Lt. Doernbach in Seoul. Here he comforts her with the assurance that she will be cared for in a place more to her liking.

Thousands of Korean children have been rescued by American Armed Forces. Every effort has been made to provide the waifs with food and shelter, and still further provision has been made for their welfare.
