

GI On-Farm Trainees Required To Report Earnings For 1952

Failure to Report May Result In Loss of GI Subsistence

World War II veterans taking GI Bill institutional-on-farm training were reminded by the Veterans Administration that reports of their 1952 earnings must be submitted to their VA regional offices no later than March 1, 1953.

Failure to submit the reports by the deadline, VA warned, may result in discontinuance of GI subsistence payments until such time as the reports reach VA.

Trainees who haven't yet received the report forms may obtain them from their instructors.

The earning reports—covering only income from productive labor for the calendar year 1952—serve a double purpose, VA said.

First, they are used by VA as the basis for adjusting each veteran's subsistence for the current year (1953). And second, they are part of the veteran's course of instruction in farm accounting, thus giving him the chance to put into practice what he has learned in the classroom.

Veterans will receive assistance from their instructors in closing their books for the past year, and in transferring the data to the VA forms. On the report, trainees also must include any periods of time they may have been engaged in employment outside the farming activity.

More than 120,000 veteran-farmers, all currently in training under the World War II GI Bill, will be required to submit the reports, VA said. The reports, however, do not apply to those in training under the new Korean GI Bill, since their monthly allowances are computed on a different basis.

State's Heart Fund Goal Is $125,000

About Half of Deaths Attributable to Heart Disease

A State goal of $125,000 for the 1953 Heart Fund Campaign, being conducted throughout the nation this month, is announced by Claiborn McD. Carr of Asheville, State Chairman of the drive.

This sum, Chairman Carr said, is "a very modest one compared with the tremendous need for scientific research, lay and professional education and community service in this field."

"Our greatest need in the fight against heart disease," he said, "is to increase and intensify the heart research already going on. While great progress has been made, too many people are still dying too young from these diseases."

In 1951, of a total of 31,140 deaths from all causes in North Carolina, 15,414, or almost exactly half, were attributed to cardiovascular diseases.

Of the estimated 10,000,000 people in the United States who have some form of cardiovascular disease, about 500,000 are elementary and high school children. Nationally, it is estimated that these illnesses cause a loss of 152,000,000 work days and a staggering economic loss each year.

Within These Walls

"Very glad," she whispered as he pulled her toward him and lifted her face to his.

She turned her head and his lips softly brushed against her hair.

His mouth still at her ear he spoke, "I'd be honored if you would permit me to escort you to the ball tomorrow night."

"I'd be delighted if that's your wish," Hannah expressed. "Now we must return to the house, Bruce. Father will be angry if he discovers we're gone."

Hand in hand, they started toward home, both feeling radiantly alive as only young lovers can.

"Careful now, Mammy," Hannah warned as the Negro woman pulled the fluffy folds of her new lilac party dress over her head. It seemed like an eternity since the bright sunbeams shining through her bedroom window had awakened her early that morning.

"Well, how do I look, Mammy? Is my hair all right?"

"Lord, Chile, you looks like a cloud in de sky," assured the jolly servant. "Then I guess I'm ready," she concluded.

Before leaving the house, James Iredell's daughter stopped by Judge Wilson's room. He hadn't been feeling at all well and had remained in bed all day.

As Hannah entered the Panel room at the Court House, James, her brother, at one side and Bruce King at the other, she was among the loveliest there. With all her dancing and laughing, she was by far the gayest. She was gay, because she was young and happy, and she had found her first love.

Later on towards the end of the evening, Bruce guided his partner away from the dance floor to a nearby anteroom. "Hannah, I must talk to you, and this is the only chance I'll have to be alone with you. I'll be leaving tomorrow, and I wanted to tell you what a wonderful time I've had. With your father's permission, I'd like to visit you again. I hope you won't consider me too bold, but I have something that I would like for you to wear." From his pocket he took a beautiful, old, gold locket and held it dangling there in his hand.

"It belonged to my mother, and ever since her death, I've kept it with me always." He fastened it about Hannah's neck and looked deeply into her eyes as she sincerely uttered:

"It's beautiful, Bruce. I'll always treasure it."

He bent his head to kiss her, and she did not turn away, but returned his kiss from the very depth of her heart.

Just then someone hurried down the hall calling, "James, James Iredell your father wants you at home immediately."

"Bruce, something's happened!" Hannah cried as she turned to leave the room.

Once in the carriage, they raced the horses up the street toward home. They hurried up the steps and into the hall. Mrs. Iredell tried to speak, but sobbing silenced her words.

"Papa, what is it?" asked James frantically.

Iredell answered, "Judge Wilson is dead."

The next few days passed by as if in a dream. I could feel the glow of candlelight in almost every room. People came and went, murmuring words I could not catch. Then I felt the rhythmic beat of feet carrying a coffin down my front steps. Within my walls the life of a great man had ended; within my walls too young people had just begun to live. I know how all this happened, for I am the Iredell House.
