M.: Prayer is an instrument that God has placed in the hands of His people, not in order that we might get what we want, but that, through it, all "ervices. God may get what He wants. "Prayer," a someone has said, "is not conquering God's reluctance, but laying hold of His highest willingness." We should pray, not that we might persuade God to go along with our own petty plans and desires, but that He will bring us to the place where He may work out His sovereign purpose more effectively in us, and through us.

As Clarence Macartney puts it: "There are answers beyond our answers-that is, beyond what seems to us an answer. David lay on the ground all night and prayed for the recovery of that child of love and sin; but the prayer, as he asked it, was not answered. The child died, but David did not cease to pray and to believe in prayer. He comforted him-self and said of the child, "I shall go to him, but he shall not return to me' (I Samuel 12:23).

Paul prayed earnestly, if ever man did. He besought the Lord three times that his grievous and painful thorn in the flesh be taken from him; but his prayer, in that form, was not granted. The thorn remained to pierce and harass him to the end of his days. And yet at the same time God answered him when he prayed, and this was his answer, "My Grace is sufficient for thee" (II Corinthians 12:9). Paul found that to be the answer to his unanswered prayer. The value of prayer isn't always in the effect it has upon God; more often it is in the effect it has upon the person praying.
