Bernie Baker And Steve Burch Win In Essay Contest

Papers Will Be Judged In National Competition

Bernie Baker, a member of the Ryland 4-H Club and Steve Burch, a member of the Chowan 8th-9th 4-H Club have been named winners in an animal health essay contest sponsored by Dr. Hess & Clark, Inc., of Ashland, Ohio, according to Robert S. Marsh, club leader.

The winning essay on "The Importance of Animal Health on Our Farm" will be judged in a national competition with entries from other states.

The winners' entries have already earned them a $5.00 Dr. Hess merchandise certificate and if either essay wins in the national judging, the winner will receive an all-expense-paid trip to the National 4-H Congress and the International Livestock Exposition in Chicago, accompanied by the Club leader.

National winner's name will be announced in the October issue of Better Farming Methodist magazine.

Peanut Growers Having Problems

Farm Bureau Protests Change In Peanut Legislation

Farmers often remark, "If we don't have one problem we have two or more." Peanut growers in Chowan County are finding this statement true at the present.

The extremely dry weather is affecting most crops. It is providing perfect conditions for the Southern stem rot disease to work on peanuts. The disease has been found in many fields and some plants are dying although only an occasional plant. Severe nematode injury has been found in a few fields in spotted areas.

On top of this, word was received Saturday, June 19, that certain organized groups of peanut users are making a concerted effort to disrupt or eliminate the peanut legislative program. Bristoe Perry, president of the Chowan County Farm Bureau, immediately called a meeting of the county organization when a goodly number of growers attended. The peanut program was explained. The group expressed their unanimous favor to have the program continue approximately as it is.

"The large type peanut that we are producing in Chowan County is what the peanut manufacturers say they want," says County Agent C. W. Overman. "So far as the group could determine, all peanuts produced in Chowan County last year moved through regular channels and none went under Government loan. Chowan growers don't feel that they are contributing to the Government loss by Government purchasers. They clearly recognize the fact that the present support price program is contributing greatly in maintaining good peanut prices and they want the program continued.

"If and when there becomes an over production of the large type peanuts, Chowan growers are willing to cooperate by fair adjustment in their acreage. At the present time they feel that there is not an over production of the large type peanut."

The County Farm Bureau group selected a committee to attend the House Agricultural committee hearing, called by Congressman Harold D. Cooley, of Nash County, held in Washington on Wednesday. M. W. Jackson, Curtis Forehand, Will A. Harrell and Rudolph Dale attended the hearing and expressed Chowan growers' views. There they joined with groups from other North Carolina peanut counties. Under the leadership of R. Flake Shaw of the N. C. Farm Bureau they banded together in an effort for the maintenance of a good program for peanut producers.

DEPENDABILITY

AWKWARD, ugly, ungainly, the "ship of the desert" is a true friend of Man. Though the slightest breeze on the desert is like a blast from the mouth of a furnace, the faithful camel can be depended on.

Each ceremony is conducted with gracious simplicity, when we are asked to officiate. Constant application and years of careful study have won us our reputation for dependability.
