

SENATOR SAM ERVIN SAYS

Washington—The Constitution of the United States and the Declaration of Independence are enshrined in the National Archives here in Washington. These documents formerly were on display in the Library of Congress.

Birth of Constitution

It is fitting that we recall a few of the incidents surrounding the birth of the Constitution. I have checked with the Library of Congress relative to the Constitution on numerous occasions in my efforts in defense of the rights to the States which are guaranteed there. I want to depart from that for a moment to discuss some of the interesting incidents in connection with the framing of the Constitution.

Impressive Sunrise or Sunset

On Monday, September 17, 1787, the delegates to the Federal Convention met for the last time in the State House in Philadelphia.

A writer recorded the following incident at that time: "Whilst the last members were signing it Doc-

New 1957 Plymouth

The new 1957 Plymouths are low, wide, ground-hugging and powerful. They have a revolutionary new Torsion-Aire ride, said to be the most important advancement in automotive design since the introduction of independent front suspensions. The parking signal light is positioned parallel to the headlight to give a dual headlight effect.

tor Franklin looking toward the President's Chair, at the back of which a rising sun happened to be painted, observed to a few members near him, that Painters had found it difficult to distinguish in their art a rising from a setting sun. I have, he said, often and often in the course of the session, and the vicissitudes of my hopes and fears as to its issue, looked at that behind the President without being able to tell whether it was rising or setting: But now at length I have the happiness to know that it is a rising and not a setting Sun."

As we prepare ourselves for the high privilege and responsibility for voting, it might be well to reflect on the observation of Benjamin Franklin and to remember where our heritages lie.

Mrs. Babylon Attends Library Conference

The seventeenth biennial conference of the Southeastern Library Association, known as SELA, was held in Roanoke, Va., October 11-13 at the Roanoke Hotel. Six hundred and eighty-two librarians were present from the following states which comprise Southeastern: Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee and Kentucky.

General sessions were held Thursday and Friday evenings. Thursday the audience was entertained by the choir from Hollins College and was then privileged to hear Dr. Henry Irving Willett, superintendent of the Richmond Public Schools and chairman of the United States delegation to the International Conference on Public Education in Geneva in 1955. His topic was "How Important is an Educated People in Today's World?" Friday evening Maurice B. Mitchell, president of Encyclopedia Britannica Films, gave a most thought provoking address on on display.

Many attending the convention visited the new Roanoke Public Library and the new Carol Newman Library, Virginia Polytechnic Institute, Blacksburg, Virginia, which is 40 miles from Roanoke.

SELA was attended by Mrs. Eugenia R. Babylon, director of the Pettigrew Regional Library, which consists of Chowan, Tyrrell and Washington counties.

N. C. Farmers Reap $8 Million Annually In Woodlot Harvests

The forest industries of North Carolina provide farmers in the state with a market for more than $8,100,000 worth of forest products harvested from their farm woodlots annually.

In addition, farmers are using huge volumes of timber from their woodlots for construction of their own houses, barns, fences and pens.

Citing figures from the U. S. Department of Commerce's newest agricultural census, Carr Gibson of Lumberton, chairman of the North Carolina Forest Industries Committee, said the vast market for farm woodlot products in North Carolina reflects the growing importance of good timberland management and fire protection.

Gibson's committee is state sponsor of the North Carolina Tree

Farm program, a movement to aid and encourage proper care and protection of privately owned forest land in order to grow repeated timber crops. Nationally, the program is operated by the forest industries through American Forest Products Industries, Washington, D. C.

The industry chairman predicted that sales of forest products from farm woodlots in the state will expand as the concept of tree farming—growing timber as a crop—continues to take hold in public consciousness.

Here! New Task-Force 57 Chevrolet Trucks!

Performance-proved in a history-making test on the ALCAN Highway to Alaska

The Alcan Highway is the road where trucks grow old before their time. The road where gravel endlessly sledgehammers the life out of trucks. Where a fog of superfine dust chokes engines, and vicious ruts subject chassis to months of wear in a few hundred miles.

Six new '57 Chevrolet trucks, heavily loaded with cargo, roared north from Dawson Creek, B.C., through 1,520 miles of mountains and mire, rain and hail to Fairbanks, Alaska. Running around the clock, they made this tortuous trip—normally a 72-hour run—in less than 45 hours. As a special test during the run, two of the trucks went the entire distance without once having their engines stopped!

Come in and see how well these new Alcan champs measure up to your job.
