

SENATOR SAM ERVIN SAYS

Washington—The District of Columbia is preparing for its greatest event, the inauguration of the President of the United States.

Inaugural
Each inaugural requires considerable temporary construction at the Capitol steps, along the parade route and at the White House reviewing stand. The oath of office is given at the Capitol at noon, followed by a quick luncheon for the officials, and the parade then moves down Constitution and Pennsylvania Avenues to the White House.

Arrangements for the inaugural are handled by a committee whose chairman is named by the President. This year the head man is Mr. Robert Fleming, a Washington banker.

Private Ceremony
January 20, the date for the inauguration of our Presidents, falls on Sunday next January. This being so, the President will be given the oath of office in a private ceremony at the White House on Sunday. He will be given the oath on Monday, January 21, for all the public to see.

Term Limitation
President Eisenhower is prohibited by the Constitution from seeking a third term.

You will recall that the Congress, controlled by Republicans, voted on March 24, 1947, to limit the number of four year terms to two. When ratified on March 1,

1951, the date that three-fourths of the state legislatures ratified the provision, it became the XXII Amendment to the Constitution. It reads in part as follows: "No person shall be elected to the office of the President more than twice, and no person who has held the office of President, or acted as President, for more than two years of a term to which some other person was elected President shall be elected to the office of the President more than once."

It has been suggested that many Republicans now regret this move and would like to have the Constitution changed to remove that objection, assuming that President Eisenhower would be willing and able to seek a third term.

Party Discipline
It is to be assumed that the President will have some difficulty keeping his party in line with his program, many realizing that he will not be able to succeed himself. While this may be so, I think the prestige and patronage of the White House will serve to keep most Republicans in line to support the Administration's policy. But human nature being what it is, it is natural for Presidential hopefuls to begin maneuvering for political advantage for four years hence.

Just how this will tell in the Congress remains to be seen. At least, it will be interesting to watch.

WAGE-SALARY SHARE OF NATIONAL INCOME REPORTED TO BE UP TO 70%

Wage and salary payments and supplements represent 70 cents of every dollar of national income, according to an analysis of data compiled by the U. S. Department of Commerce. This is a new high proportion, and compares with a ration of 64 cents in both 1950 and 1940, and with less than 60 cents in 1929.

The seasonally adjusted figures at annual rates show that compensation of employees made up $237.2 billions of the $338.7 billions of national income in the second quarter of this year. Nearly $14 billions of the compensation total consist of supplements to wages and salaries, largely employer contributions to private and public retirement and welfare funds. Over the long term, supplements to wages and salaries have shown a greater rate of growth than other principal elements of national income.

THESE HAVE LIVED TO SEE ANOTHER DAY—Out of every war come refugees. The rebellion in Hungary has been no exception. The Hungarian refugees, above, sit on beds of straw in Traiskirchen, Austria. Mostly women and children, they fled into Austria following Russia's devastation of Hungary.

Weekly Devotional Column

By JAMES MACLENNIE

Here are some recent religious news items that may be of interest to readers of this column:

What is the message of a minister when he returns to a pulpit after being imprisoned (falsely, of course) in Hungary for black market currency dealings? An estimated 1,200 showed up in the 400 capacity Lutheran Church in Budapest recently to hear released Bishop Lajos Orjass, a man who seemingly had lost everything. This was his message: "When everybody deserted me and I shook with fear, my Saviour called me and took me in His strong arms. He led me through a burning flame and showed me the beginning of a new life. I knew then that if nothing is constant in this world, God is unchanged; and to Him, that which was sin yesterday remains sin today, and that which was holy yesterday remains holy today.

Among the words of Laszlo Rajk, former Hungarian communist leader executed during purge, were prayers to God for forgiveness. Moscow radio complains that lack of cultural opportunities in the Soviet Union is responsible for large numbers of young people turning to God for consolation.

Dr. John S. Wilder, for 50 years pastor of Calvary Baptist Temple in Savannah, Georgia, has preached 6,128 sermons, made 141,138 sick calls, performed 6,505 marriages and conducted 6,271 funerals. In addition, he has led 5,908 meetings and written 5,403 published articles. He is still going strong.

The First Baptist Church of Little Rock, Arkansas, has offered to refund the money of any member who isn't satisfied after tithing for three months. No taker reported. Liquor establishments outnumber churches better than four to three. FBI reports that 60 per cent of 2,945,216 arrests during the first six months of 1956 related to alcohol. Largest Protestant Church for lepers in the Orient, located in Soonchun, Korea, is completing a remodeling program made necessary by the rapid growth of its membership. The church, which is Presbyterian, has grown to over 1,000 members, all active. The remodeling was done by leper artisans. The church supports four full-time evangelists who work in other leper colonies, and has among its members 46 students of the world's only theological seminary for lepers. Dr. E. T. Boyer, pastor of the church, is also president of the seminary, which opened its doors in April.

Initial returns of 16 Presbyteries of the Southern Presbyterian Church which have voted on the ordination of women as church officers (but not as pastors), show ten for the change, six against. There are still nineteen Presbyteries to vote.

Children's Book Week Observed This Week

"It's 'always book time' is the slogan for National Children's Book Week which is being observed this week. One week in November is designated for emphasis upon the value of books and the large part they play in making fuller, better and happier lives. The purpose of book week is that by stressing books and libraries for seven days many children and parents will see what broad vistas are open to them and will continue to read throughout the year.

Local libraries have attractive displays using special book week posters, streamers, book marks and new books. Local citizens are urged to visit libraries and find out what pleasure and stimulus books can give.

She Shepard-Pruden Library will waive fines for any books long over due if they are returned during the remainder of Book Week of the first week in December.
