A LIFT FOR TODAY

* He that overcometh shall inherit all things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son.

—Revelation 21:7
DIVINELY ENDOWED with intelligence and understanding, we as Christians should develop these abilities so that God may express his power and love through us. Let us remember that we are a vital part of God's plan for His Work in this world, and that with His presence we can achieve our goal of good, becoming the children of the Living God.
For Thy sustaining grace and love, we thank Thee, O God.

We Salute 'Em

Though Chowan County is one of the smallest in the State Chowan Home Demonstration Clubs proved that size is no particular handicap to quality. The Chowan Club women took second place in the publicity book contest at Farm-Home Week last week, being led by Mecklenburg by only one point.

The honor reflects initiative, hard work and knowledge of home demonstration club activities, so that the women are to be congratulated upon their outstanding achievement.

The Herald is glad to have had an opportunity in cooperating in a small way with the club women, and salutes the ladies for giving Mecklenburg County a tight race for first honor.

"Be Safe--Be Seen"

Modern mechanized equipment has been a major factor in revolutionizing agricultural techniques that had been virtually unchanged for centuries. This equipment is absolutely essential to successful farming today, and to the continued existence of the family-sized farm which is the backbone of all American agriculture. At the same time, like all mechanical innovations, it has led to a safety problem. It can be dangerous if misused.

The farm equipment industry has been carrying on an aggressive safety program. It is obvious that the great majority of accidents connected with the use of tractors and other equipment are the direct result of human carelessness, ignorance, and apathy. Young children are allowed to run the machines—and disaster is thus invited. Farmers make mechanical changes or additions of their own devising—and these, more often than not, create critical special hazards. All kinds of elementary safety rules are ignored—and the casualty statistics mount.

Special emphasis is being put on proper lighting for equipment which is moved on roads. The industry's motto in this is "Be safe—be seen", and that covers the situation like a glove. Many an unlighted or inadequately lighted tractor has been driven down a road at night, to come to crashing grief and to bring death or serious injury to its driver and others.

The equipment makers are doing everything possible to build safety into the machines. They are publicizing safety instructions and messages. The rest is up to the user. He, and he alone, can stop the chance-taking that accidents feed fat on.

Later Than You Think

Many of you who are reading this have been, are, or will soon depart on your summer vacation. If you have chosen the resorts with the expectation of rubbing elbows with many people, old acquaintances or strangers, you have not been or will not be disappointed. By all accounts the resort business is booming.

But if you rub elbows with people all the rest of the year, if your problem is a surfeit of crowds, and your choice has been to slip off where you might gain refreshment from the quiet of the hills, or plains, or shores, then the story is likely to be different.

Two of this newspaper's correspondents made the second choice and have reported their experiences. One set out in a trailer with his family into Western mountains and along Pacific shores. At the entrance to one state park he found the All-Sites-Taken sign up at mid-afternoon, and, looking back, he saw stalled cars and trailers, bumper to bumper, looking like a "hill-and-dale stream of refugees" before an invading army.

The other took his family and headed for an Atlantic beach—not for a resort, but for a stretch that would bring the family close to nature rather than to people. He found a state reservation. But when the family pitched their tent for the night the area was overcrowded and the camp facilities overtaxed.

Further, he learned, there isn't another com-

Heard & Seen By Buff

His picture, but not words, gave Johnny Kramer, star quarterback of the Edenton Aces, who will be missing from this year's lineup due to going to a prep school, a lot of publicity Tuesday morning. The News and Observer carried a story about two star football players in the National Football League. The two stars concerned were Ron Kramer of Michigan and Paul Hornung of Notre Dame. Pictures of the two stars were included in the paper except the Kramer picture was that of Edenton's Johnny Kramer—unless Ron Kramer is a split image of Johnny. Apparently the guy who got the picture out of the N & O morgue picked up the wrong Kramer.

Two happy parents are Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hollowell, Jr., who have just adopted a daughter, Martha Jo Hollowell. And Herbert is no piker, for he sent Calvin Foxwell, who works in his drug store, down to The Herald office with a handful of cigars. "Mr. Hollowell says, pass 'em around," said Calvin, and, that's what we did. Congratulations!

It was very pleasant last week when it turned cool for a couple of nights, so much so that covers felt pretty good. One local lady got so cold one night she got up and put on her husband's long johns, but when she passed the mirror and saw herself she figured she looked so "hot" she crawled out of the things.

Somebody was telling me the other day about a wedding where the bride's brother, who apparently didn't have all his buttons, was one of the attendants. It appears that the bride was waiting to march down the aisle, but the brother didn't see the bridegroom. Presently, the brother told his sister, "Sue, you might as well go on down there and get married, for it don't look like Bill is coming."

And speaking about weddings, we printed some invitations the other day and after the job was completed it was discovered that the last "I" in Virginia was omitted, so that the invitations had to be reprinted. I told the new bride about having to print the job twice, whereupon she said, "Why didn't you save the ones with the error, for I could have sent 'em to some of my ignorant relatives?"

It isn't exactly football weather and nobody knows it any better than the group of high schools boys who began this week to practice in preparation for the coming football season. The boys have been working out twice daily even when in some cases the mercury hovered around the 90-degree mark. It's tough, but this training is the foundation on which the Aces must develop a good football machine. Now is the time for the boys to get in proper physical condition. Having received this, they will be better able to play the game. Advance reports are to the effect that the Aces will be a strong aggregation again this year, so here's hoping they'll uncork some good games for the local fans. Anyway, with football practice time rolling around, it's about time for the weather man to take notice. One fellow after Monday's scorcher, said he didn't expect to complain next winter, no matter how cold it got.

Town Councilmen had a narrow escape Tuesday night. You see the meetings usually last pretty long but Tuesday night's meeting was over a little before 10 o'clock. Mayor Kehayes always invites the "boys" to his restaurant for a little snack before hitting the hay, but, of course, that is if the restaurant has closed for the night. It wasn't long after closing hours Tuesday night when the Councilmen went to the restaurant and by a matter of minutes got a free hand-out. But let any of the Councilmen eat at Ernest's place during regular hours and they'd have to fork up just like any other person. There's no respecter of persons then, you see.

parable reservation along the shore from Maine to Cape Hatteras. And when he returned home and checked with the National Park Service he found that of the 3,700 miles of Atlantic and Gulf shoreline from Canada to Mexico only 240 miles are in state or federal hands reserved for public recreation. Why? Because the people, and hence their Congress, are still bemused by the traditional picture of America's territorial vastness.

Yet ponder these figures; The National Park Service says it is properly equipped to take care of not more than 30,000,000 visitors a year; last year 48,000,000 swarmed in; by 1966, the service's centennial year, it expects 80,000,000. And providing all these vacationers is an American population estimated to reach 240,000,000 before the end of the century.

"Each club should be sure that they have several from their club at each day's meeting to help plan our year's program," Miss Morris urges.
